LOST CHILD IS FOUND SPENT NIGHT IN WOODS

4-Year-Old Son of John Packer, of Marsh Creek, Wandered Off.

FOUND ONE MILE AWAY

Discovered by Mrs. Irvin Confer, Near Her Home at Fairview--Party of Searchers Scoured Woods all Night—Mother Collapsed.

Thinking to follow his father, who had gone to salt his sheep, little four-years-old Henry Orvis Packer, a son of Mr. and Mrs. John Packer, of Marsh Creek, strayed off into the woods on Sunday night, last, and although scores of men and women searched the country for miles around, was not found until shortly before 10 o'clock on Monday morning.

In its bare feet and with nothing to protect its little body but a thin waist and skirt, the child lay out in the intense cold all night long, trying to find warmth under some leaves and brush and finally sobbing itself to sleep. When found, on Monday morning, by Mrs. Irvin Confer, of Fairview, the child was huddled under some brush one mile from home, almost famished from cold.

David Tanyer, who lives in the Ridges, carried the child to its parents' home. Mrs. Packer, the child's mother, had spent the night in anguish and distress. When Mr. Tanyer walked into her home on Monday and placed the lost child in her arms she was overcome with joy and in the reaction following the terrible suspense of the night, she collapsed.

The child, while terribly weakened from exposure, soon recovered and yesterday was playing about the yard at home as if nothing had happened.

The disappearance of the child and the scouring of the woods by a small army of men and women created the greatest excitement in the neighborhood. It was due largely to a mother's instinct that the child was discovered before it died. Mrs. Confer, who had aided in the search, thought, or imagined so at least, that she had heard the faint sobbing of the child nearby her home. Taking a dog she started in the direction of the sound.

"Baby, baby" she called, again and again, not knowing the child's name, but hoping by her voice to attract its attention.

A sharp bark from her dog told her that her search was not in vain. As she sped onward through the brush her ear caught the sound of a voice, so faint that it could scarcely be heard. Approaching the point from which she thought the sound had come, she was still unable to see the child. Just when she had begun to fear that her ears had been deceiving her, the child's voice was again heard.

"Mama, Mama," sobbed the child, now so weak that its poor little voice could not be heard more than a few feet away.

Mrs. Confer tore away some brush and there, almost at her feet, lay the lost child. It was too weak to stand. The brush and leaves for some distance about, had recently been burned. During the night, when the ground was damp from the dew, the child had crawled over the charred leaves and brush and its body was black from head to feet. It was for this reason that as it lay under the brush the child had escaped the notice of these out hunting for it, some of whom had passed and repassed that spot not once but a number of times. Mrs. Confer quickly picked up the child and with a cry of joy hurried with it to her home. After stimulants had been applied and its body covered with good, warm clothing, the child was taken in charge by Mr. Tanyer and removed to the home of its almost frantic parents.

The child had become lost in such a simple way that its disappearance was not noticed, or rather understood, for several hours. When Mr. Packer, the little fellow's father, started out to salt his sheep it was almost dusk. The child started after him, whereupon Mr. Packer turned about and sent the little fellow back toward the house. Little dreaming that his child had not gone home Mr. Packer continued on his way to care for his sheep. Mrs. Packer quickly missed the child but having seen the boy start away with his father thought the two were together. Several times she was filled with apprehension and as it became quite dark she every now and then found herself suddenly stopping and wondering whether the child was safe.

It was some time until her husband

TWO CENTURY-OLD DEEDS RECORDED FIRST TIME

One is 115 and Other 107 Years Old on Lot No. 57 in Milesburg.

FIRST TIME ON RECORD

Property Then in Mifflin County, Transferred in 1795 From Samuel Miles to Jacob Lee, Who Sold it in 1803 to Abraham Lee.

Two interesting and very old deeds were recorded at the Court House last week by Recorder William Brown and Deputy Recorder Walter Armstrong. One deed is 115 years old and the other 107 years old. Neither deed had ever been recorded. Both were filed by Squire Bierly, of Milesburg, and were recorded as a formality in straightening out the title to the property in question, which is located in Milesburg.

The two deeds cover the same property and were drawn up at a time when Milesburg was located in Mifflin County, instead of Centre County. Such previous records relating to the property as may exist and if recorded at all, are entered on the records in Mifflin County. The two old deeds in question are still in a remarkably good state of preservation, although, of course, showing the effects of handling during the century or more they have been in existence. The handwriting is quite distinct. Where the deeds have been creased in folds the paper is partly torn.

The older of the two deeds was drawn on March 25, 1795, for the transfer of Lot No. 57, in Milesburg, from Samuel Miles to Jacob Lee. The consideration specified in the deed is 10 pounds, or not quite $50. On May 21, 1803, Jacob Lee transferred the property to Abraham Lee, so the second deed says, the consideration in this instance being 100 pounds or upward of $500.

Supposedly, Jacob Lee improved the land with the erection of one or more buildings to enhance the value five fold in the eight years it was in his possession.

MARRIED AT HOWARD

A very pretty wedding was that at Howard, at 6 o'clock, last night, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Henderson when their daughter, Miss Mary Josephine, became the bride of Clarence A. Yearick, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Yearick.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father O'Hanlon, of Bellefonte, assisted by Rev. Father C. Logan McKinney, of Juniata. William Moss, of Chester, was best man. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Loran Henderson. Mary Catherine Henderson and Nellie Bennison, nieces of the bride and groom, were flower girls. The wedding march was played by Miss Zelma Yearick, a sister of the groom.

Later in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Yearick departed for Atlantic City, where they will spend their honeymoon, after which they will be "at home" at 265 South Ninth Street, Philadelphia, in which city Mr. Yearick is employed by the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company. Mrs. Yearick is one of Howard's most popular young ladies and a member of the Sewing Circle of that place. The guests were chiefly relatives and intimate friends of the happy young couple, who were the recipients of many useful and valuable presents.

VALUABLE HORSE KILLED

Train Destroys Animal Belonging to Roy Garbrick, of Near Zion.

A horse, valued at $250 and owned by Roy Garbrick, of near Zion, was killed on Saturday night, last, by a Central Railroad passenger train. The horse was killed on a lane crossing and because of this fact Mr. Garbrick will be unable to secure damages from the railroad company.

During Saturday Mr. Garbrick was in town and completed negotiations which had been under way for some time for purchase by him of what is known as the Henry Garbrick farm. He paid $12,000 for the interest of other heirs. Later that day he drove to his home, on the farm, and had his team of bays turned out in the barn yard. Just how one of the horses managed to get out and onto the tracks, where the Central railroad crosses the lane, about 200 feet from the barn, is not known. The evening passenger train, which leaves Bellefonte at 6.55, struck the horse as it was on the lane crossing. The horse was one of the finest in that section of the county and was greatly prized by Mr. Garbrick.

Events Recalled By Quaint Old Papers

Due to the thoughtfulness and kindness of Mrs. Harry C. Valentine, "The Republican" has secured possession of and from time to time will publish extracts from a number of rare and especially interesting old documents and other papers, recalling persons, customs and the atmosphere of life in Bellefonte fifty or more years ago. Some of the papers, in fact, go back much farther and have to do with men and events of prominence in that period and which today are more or less unknown or forgotten, except by the few of the older families.

A few nights ago the editor of "The Republican" spent several hours very enjoyably in what might be termed a hasty glimpse or reading of the papers we have referred to. It was all so interesting and instructive that we were prompted to ask permission to publish some in these columns that the many readers of "The Republican" might also share in the enjoyment we experienced. One thing that impressed itself upon our mind as we read through old papers, newspaper clippings, etc., was that half a century ago men were more closely allied, were more deeply interested with the daily affairs and were more personally concerned with the welfare of one another than perhaps is the case today.

By a strange coincidence, in a letter written by a prominent resident of Bellefonte to a friend at Harrisburg, the former made the comment that the streets here were in a most deplorable condition. This letter was written fifty or more years ago. Could the writer of that letter but return to Bellefonte during the present period of building the State road he would in all probability be tempted to remark that what he said half a century ago would hold good even now.

An old newspaper clipping, probably taken from "The Whig," published in Bellefonte fifty years ago, is particularly interesting, not only in showing who were some of the merchants of that day but in contrasting the style of advertising done then with that of the present time. One advertisement appearing in the clipping in question is that of John Montgomery, the founder of the present large and more pretentious firm of Montgomery & Company. John Montgomery had his shop or store in a building on what now is the site of Mrs. W. W. Montgomery's residence, in Allegheny Street. Captain Henry H Montgomery is the sole surviving child.

John Montgomery's advertisement covered a space of not quite two and one-half inches in length, one column wide. A single advertisement of the firm of Montgomery & Company of today covers a space of one column and one-half every week in "The Republican." In John Montgomery's advertisement is a very small illustration, showing a tailor fitting a coat on a customer. Both men in the illustration are shown to be wearing the old style cutaway coat, much different from the present day cutaway and somewhat resembling the evening dress coat of this period. This is what the advertisement has to say:

"The Subscriber has just returned from Philadelphia with a choice assortment of Clothes, Cassimers, Vestings, etc., suitable for gentlemen's wear, which he will make up to order on the shortest notice and in the most substantial and fashionable manner. He can, if required, make a full suit on one day's notice. He continues, as formerly, to make up material furnished by others, and customers may avail themselves of his advice in making their purchases of any of the merchants living in the vicinity.

"The Fashions are regularly received, but customers may rely upon having their garments made to any style that they may direct. All work warranted to fit and give satisfaction.

"JOHN MONTGOMERY."

"Bellefonte, November 15, 1848."

Another advertisement appearing in the same clipping is that of the Franklin Hotel, which was located on what now is the site of the Garman House. The advertisement announces that the hotel is being conducted by John H. Morrison and that he

"Respectfully informs the citizens of Centre County and the traveling community that he has taken the well known House, formerly occupied by his father, Samuel Morrison, where he intends to be at all times prepared to accommodate his friends and the public in general who may favor him with their patronage.

"It is his determination that his House shall not be surpassed by any in the place.

"Persons visiting Bellefonte, either on business or pleasure, will find the FRANKLIN HOTEL an agreeable stopping place."

Still another interesting advertisement appearing in the clipping is that of P. M. Housel, who announces a NEW ESTABLISHMENT for the sale of Clocks, Watches, Jewelry &c. His advertisement reads:

"P. M. Housel would respectfully inform the citizens of Bellefonte and vicinity, that he has opened a shop in the room recently occupied by Mrs. Curtin, as a store, where he will keep constantly on hand for sale, a large and splendid assortment of Goods in his line, consisting, in part, of Gold and Silver Lever, Lepine, Anchor and Verge Watches; Eight Day and Thirty Hour Clocks, Spectacles of all kinds, and to suit all ages; Gold and Silver Pencils, Gold Finger and Ear Rings; Breastpins; Fob, Guard and Vest Chains; Slides; Keys and Lockets; Diamond pointed Gold Pens, with Gold and Silver Cases; Steel Beads; Purse and Bag Clasps and Trimmings; Spoons of every kind and variety; Razors and Razor Straps; Genuine Roegers Knives; and all articles usually kept by persons in his line of business, which he will sell low for Cash.

"Clocks, Watches, and Jewelry cleaned and repaired on the shortest notice and in the best manner."

In another part of the clipping, the Graefenburg Company advertises two medicines and announces that they are kept on hand by the following:

"The Agents for Centre County are George Livingston, Bellefonte; G. C. Ryman, Milesburg; George W. Johnson and George Jack, Boalsburg; A. Gregg, Linden Hall Mills; M. & W. Riddle, Pleasant Gap; Samuel F. Rodman, Zion; G. W. Stover, Nittany."

Clinton County agents are announced as being A. H. Beal, at Solona; James Stuart, at Mill Hall; George Custard and Long and Lindemuth, at Lamar."

That the manufacturers of the two medicines had all confidence in them is suggested by the fact that the advertisement directs that all purchasers, if not cured, may get their money back from the agents.

Next week "The Republican" will reproduce an interesting obituary of Hon. Charles Huston, with resolutions on his death as adopted by the Centre County bar.

Orchard Inspections.

The inspections of all orchards in the townships of Benner, Spring and Patton will be continued until completed. T. C. Foster, the inspector, who is the regularly authorized representative of the Division of Zoology of the Department of Agriculture, at Harrisburg, is in charge and wishes "The Republican" to announce that he will be pleased to render any service to the fruit growers of the county while making the inspections that owners of orchards may desire and which come in the line of his duties. The object of these inspections is to locate the presence of the San Jose scale and other destructive insects.

Doctors Discuss Intoxication.

At the regular monthly meeting yesterday of the Centre County Medical Society, Dr. P. H. Dale, of State College, read a paper on "Intoxication", after which there was a general discussion of the subject. Dr. R. G. H. Hayes, who represented the society at the recent State convention, at Pittsburg, presented a very interesting report on the proceedings. Before adjournment a clinic was held at the Bellefonte hospital.

BELLEFONTE BOY AT UPRISING IN PORTUGAL

WRITES FROM LIBERIA

Letter Mailed September 12, Takes 26 Days to Reach Bellefonte—Boat Despatched from Gibraltar to Scene of Uprising.

Bellefonte has a boy at Lisbon, the scene of the rebellion which has overturned the throne of King Manuel, of Portugal. Trood Bidwell, a son of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Bidwell, of this place, and a United States Navy officer, is on the United States Cruiser "Des Moines," which was last week directed by cable from Washington to proceed from Gibraltar to Lisbon. The United States government ordered the big cruiser to Lisbon to see that during the period of the uprising the interests of all Americans are protected.

Mrs. Bidwell, on Saturday, last, received a letter from her son, written from Monrovia, Liberia, where the "Des Moines" was cruising. This, however, was one month before the uprising against the reign of King Manuel, prompted by his infatuation for a pretty actress and dancer. Trood Bidwell's letter was dated September 12. It was on the way exactly twenty-six days until it was received in Bellefonte. At that time he and the other officers on the boat had no intimation of the impending outbreak in Portugal. More recently the "Des Moines" sailed to Gibraltar, in Spain, and it was at that point that a cablegram from Washington was received despatching the cruiser to Lisbon.

Trood Bidwell's letter is so interesting that we asked permission to publish some parts of it so that his friends at home might have some idea of his travels and the countries he is visiting, thousands of miles from his old home. His letter, in part, follows:

DEAR MOTHER:—

Yes, we are still alive and kicking, appearances to the contrary. This is the first letter for many weeks, for your son has had "tropicalitis." Nothing serious, just a tired feeling which comes to one living in the Tropics, the chief symptom being the desire to sleep about twenty-three out of twenty-four hours, the other hour being spent doing. This life is enough to drive one wild, but I guess I will escape. Rain, rain, rain, and then more rain, is the daily excitement. When we first arrived we had no two dry days in succession, but just at present we have no dry days.

We were pretty well scared for a time on account of a Black-water fever, which was spreading over the ship. It is really a very bad form of malaria and at first we did not know how to handle it. We took a trip to Las Calmos, Canary Islands, for a change of climate and to place five cases in the hospital there, and as far as we know they are getting along very nicely. Those were the last and no new cases have developed, so that we are feeling very much easier.

The dear old U. S. A. would look like Paradise now to us, but for a few months the nearest we will get to it will be in our thoughts. We are picturing to ourselves the good times ahead of us in Boston, for that is our home port.

The only real diversion we have had in many moons was a luncheon given us by the President of Liberia. There were present about twenty negroes and the officers from our boat. Everything went off all right and we had quite a bit of fun out of it.

As I am writing, it is four o'clock, about twelve o'clock at home, and I wonder what you are doing. How I would love to be with you, if only for a few minutes. It would seem good to be home once again, but I guess I'll have to wait a while. We have nothing definite as to our return, but we are talking about next April. One year in this place! What a nightmare, especially when we think of the good times they are having in the States. I had a postal from an old friend at home the other day and it was the most cheering thing I have had in a long time. It took me home for a few minutes and once again I was contented. Goodbye, my dear mother, with love to all and especially to you.

Your loving son,

TROOD.

Home Teams Win at Football.

The State College football team on Saturday, last, defeated the Carnegie Tech. eleven, 61—0, State having an easy time of it from start to finish. On the same day the Bellefonte Academy team went to Williamsport and defeated the Dickinson Seminary eleven, 6—3, in a bitterly contested game.

MR. TENER WILL VISIT BELLEFONTE OCT. 22ND.

WILL HOLD RECEPTION

Instead of Addressing Mass Meeting, Distinguished Visitor Will be Afforded Opportunity to Meet Citizens Face to Face.

John K. Tener, Republican nominee for Governor, will visit Bellefonte on Saturday, October 22. Mr. Tener will be accompanied by John M. Reynolds, nominee for Lieutenant Governor; Secretary of Internal Affairs Henry Houck, State Treasurer Charles F. Wright, Gabriel H. Moyer and others who comprise the party making a campaign tour of the State.

A public reception will be tendered the distinguished visitors during their stay in Bellefonte. It is not proposed to hold a mass meeting or anything of the sort, but rather to afford Mr. Tener and his colleagues on the ticket an opportunity to greet the people of Bellefonte and as many others from surrounding points as may happen to be in town on that day.

This will not be Mr. Tener's first visit to Bellefonte. Before his nomination for Governor he made a trip here especially for the dedication of the new home of the Elks, with which order he is prominently identified. During the week of the grangers picnic Mr. Tener and Mr. Reynolds spent a day at Centre Hall, as the guests of Leonard Rhone. On that occasion Mr. Tener made a brief visit to State College, at the suggestion of President Sparks, where he greeted the large number of students enrolled at that famous institution. Mr. Tener subsequently said that the few minutes he spent with the State College students was one of the most delightful incidents of his tour of the State.

Mr. Tener's proposed visit on October 22 was planned at his personal suggestion. He was so well pleased with what he saw of Bellefonte and Bellefonte people on his previous visit that he expressed a desire to return at some future date. In fact, on the day of the Republican State convention, after he had been nominated for Governor, Mr. Tener spoke of his first visit here and, while chatting with County Chairman Keller, County Treasurer Fink, Davy Chambers, Commissioners' Clerk Ed. Williams and one or two others, said that he would make it a point before the close of the campaign to come to Bellefonte. When State Chairman Walton was planning the campaign tour of the several counties, Mr. Tener asked that his itinerary be so arranged that he would be sure to visit Centre County. It was finally arranged to have him come here on Saturday, October 22.

The plan to have a public reception rather than a mass meeting is especially pleasing to Mr. Tener. He finds more genuine pleasure in meeting people face to face than in delivering campaign speeches from the platform. This is characteristic of the successful business man. Mr. Tener has been in public life for a number of years but he is most at home when brought into contact with business men.

Blue Laws at State College.

As a result of a crusade by the Woman's Civic Club, of State College, the old Blue Laws were rigidly enforced at that place on Sunday, last, and the "lid" was nailed down, hard and fast. College students who failed to lay in a supply of tobacco, cigars, etc., for over Sunday, were compelled to borrow or go without these so-called contributing factors toward ease and comfort. No ice cream was delivered during the day. The women behind the crusade assert their determination to see that the Blue Laws are enforced each Sunday.

Miss Woods Elected Teacher.

At a meeting of the Bellefonte school board, on Monday evening, last, Miss Mame Woods was elected a primary grade teacher, for the additional position recently created owing to the congestion of pupils in the primary rooms. Miss Woods is a daughter of Edward Woods, the mail carrier, and has been teaching with successful results for several years.

Mr. Patton Greeting Voters.

Charles E. Patton, Republican nominee for Congress in this district, is spending a part of this week visiting points in Centre County and greeting as many of his friends as possible. It is his hope that before the close of the campaign he will find it possible to visit every part of Centre County.

LABOR LINES UP FOR J. K. TENER

THE LEADERS ACT QUICKLY

Greenawalt's Personal Game Blocked When Exposed By Representative Union Men.

An attempt to work a scheme to influence organized labor in the present gubernatorial campaign has proven a boomerang for Berry and his party.

President Greenawalt, of the State Federation of Labor, is being denounced upon every hand for seeking to use the position which he fills temporarily to advance his own political interests and to promote the cause of a combination of politicians who are striving to use the Keystone Party to land themselves and their friends in public office.

Greenawalt's political campaigning for the Keystone Party is quite natural, as he is known as an ardent Democrat, but his efforts to use his position to influence the votes of the wage earners of the state are resented by the rank and file of organized labor in Pennsylvania as well as the influential leaders of various trade unions.

Tener a Friend of Labor.

Greenawalt's action, it is pointed out, is most reprehensible, on account of the fact that John K. Tener, the Republican nominee for governor, has for years been known as a staunch friend of the workingmen throughout western Pennsylvania, where he grew up in an atmosphere which would naturally make him sympathise with the wage earners. He spent his boyhood days working in a steel mill in the great Pittsburg district, and in recent years he figured in the satisfactory settlement of labor disputes in his home community, being chosen to appear in consultation as the representative of the workingmen. The only period in his career when he was a large employer of labor was when he was at the head of a glass manufacturing establishment, and he had none but union men employed about the plant.

Upon several occasions during his tour of the state Mr. Tener has taken occasion to refer to his advocacy of legislation in the interest of labor, and he has pointed out that through the agency of the Republican party many excellent labor laws have been passed, most of them at the suggestion and upon the request of union labor. The employers' liability bill passed at the last session of the Pennsylvania legislature was enacted by a Republican majority in the senate and the house and was signed by a Republican governor.

The fact that John Mitchell, one of the most respected and popular leaders in the crowd of labor in recent years, is a warm advocate of the election of Mr. Tener to the governorship, has been known to the labor leaders of the state from the very outset of the campaign.

Mitchell Indorses Tener Plan.

John Mitchell has heartily indorsed Mr. Tener's proposition for the appointment of a state commission to be composed of employers and wage earners, whose duty it shall be to investigate every phase of the question of employers' liability and kindred subjects and report to the coming session of the legislature such changes in existing laws as may be deemed advisable. Mr. Tener has given his word to do everything in his power to have satisfactory laws and amendments to lays enacted at once.

In order that workingmen of Pennsylvania shall not be misled by the tactics of Greenawalt and others working with Berry, an address has been issued to wage earners over the signatures of Patrick Gilday, president of district No. 2, United Mine Workers of America, and Thomas Haggerty, member of the national executive board of the United Mine Workers of America.

They declare that Greenawalt is acting on his own responsibility, that there is no distinctive labor candidate in the field, that Greenawalt's appeal was not authorized by any convention or organized labor assembly, and they protest against any labor leader attempting to dictate to organized labor.

They say: "We can recall instances when organized labor asked for and received the assistance of prominent men in the Republican party who are now being villified by some of the advocates of the Keystone Party."

WOOD FOR SPOOLS

The U. S. Department of Agriculture is authority for the statement that the paper birch, often called also white birch, or canoe birch, is one of the few timber trees in this country which seem to be holding their own against ax and fire. The average citizen, however, probably takes no particular interest in the paper birch. Yet it is doubtful if any other kind of wood on the face of the earth is found in so many households; for paper birch furnishes most of the spools made in the United States.

Maine is the chief center of spool manufacture. Its factories turn out 800 million spools yearly, chiefly birch. Few woods as hard as this can be worked with as little dulling of the tools; its principal recommendation lies in that fact. It is handsome in color, and, after the wood becomes seasoned, it shrinks and warps very little. This is an important consideration, because the delicate machinery that winds the thread would fail to work if the spool changed its shape to a perceptible degree.

The birch wood for spools must be selected and handled with care. The tree's red disk heart wood is objectionable because it will not turn smooth in the lathe, and the color is not desired. Few industries waste more wood, in proportion to the quantity used, than spool making. Heartwood, knots, and all other defects, frequently amounting to more than one-half of the tree, are rejected. From one-half to three-fourths of the remainder may go to the refuse heap in sawing the bars and turning the spools. Despite this waste the paper birch does not appear to be threatened with extinction. It is a fire tree—that is, it spreads rapidly over spaces left vacant by forest fires. The most extensive paper birch forests of Maine and New Hampshire occupy tracts which were laid bare by the great forest fires which swept the region from 1825 to 1837.

The tree is short lived. At an age when the white cedar, for example, is just beginning to lay on useful wood, the paper birch has passed its prime and is ready for decay. It is placed at still further disadvantage by being unable to compete with other trees for light and soil. It prospers when growing alone, but it gives up the fight after stronger trees begin to crowd it. Nevertheless, it is believed that more paper birch is growing in the United States today then two hundred years ago.

Corsets and Society.

A woman used to think if she paid $15.00 for a pair of made to order corsets that she was extravagant. Now $20 is the lowest price, and from that the prices range up to $75. When we put this in connection with the remark of a famous corset maker recently, that to keep up with the fashions woman must have at least five different styles of corsets, already we foresee an expenditure of at the very least $100, says the Philadelphia Evening Times.

What does this set of five include? First there is the corset for the tailor-made costume. This being the most important, much care must be taken in its making. The idea is to keep the corset light and flexible, therefore it is made of rather plain fabric and with the simplest trimming. These models are not so high in the bust as last season's, and with the slightest possible curve at the waist.

A long corset is made for the woman with large hips. At the lower edge of the corset there is attached a wide strip of open-meshed webbing. Then again there is the boneless elastic support to be worn underneath the corset. This very noticeably reduces the flesh.

Next in importance, the evening dress corset, is made with the fewest possible bones, and is cut in a point at the back so that the lacing begins at the waist line. The bust is extremely low.

The third corset in this series is for the formal afternoon gown or the moderately high necked dinner gown, and comes between the tailor corset and the one designed for the ball gown. The lines are so long and slender as it is possible to make them and the bust is medium in height. This is slightly boned and usually laces in front

After they have had its use and importance pointed out to them most women are keenly interested in the negligee corset to be worn with the negligee and house gown. It is short and supple, sometimes made of silk material which clings to the figure and again of pliable damask.

Then, last, there is the corset made especially for outdoor sports. This is a short corset and is designed to give the greatest possible freedom to the lungs. It has a flexible steel in front and whalebones at the sides of the lacings, and one double bone at each side where it comes over the hips. Yet despite the fact that it has so few bones, it is well built and will be a great comfort to woman who plays golf, rides or canoes and who does not want the long, stiff corset which goes under a street costume.

Hints for Stock Owners.

The sheep that both feeds and clothes us, besides adding tremendously to the fertility of the land, is bound to be one of the biggest economic agricultural factors. Let us have fewer dogs and more sheep.

Hogs often get crooked legs for lack of exercise.

Pure air, pure water, clean food, and a clean place to sleep, make hogs profitable.

When a small bit of pork costs a day's wages, and even a ham bone is precious, there need be no fear of overstocking the hog market.

No animal on the farm will respond to kind treatment quicker than the hog. And kind treatment means a good deal in the accumulation of marketable meat.

Give the horses some carrots, apples or potatoes two or three times a week. Some people call this "shocking," but it pays.

Don't let the breeding mare get down to skin and bone. It is bad for her and bad for her colt. Give her extra feed and care.

A fine saddle horse was running down. His teeth were floated, made even and in just one month he was plump and round and sleek.

Heavy draft teams hauling heavy loads keep in good condition when kept at the fast walking gait, and accomplish more than when trotted part of the time.

Give the cows a chance to get under the shed every night now. If too cool, keep them in the stable.

The best cows are never cheap, and are seldom for sale; so it pays to give the heifer calves the best of care.

Some farmers leave pails of milk sitting around on the cold ground, or hang them up some place while they do the chores, and then blame the cream seperator and its maker because the machine cannot separate as much cream from chilled milk as from milk separated as near animal heat as possible.

Do not let the summer milkers run down in condition, and go into winter quarters thin in flesh.

It will take a lot of feed to get them back into paying condition if they are allowed to get thin.

This will cost more than to keep them up by extra feed; besides, if given the extra feed in time, they will pay for every pound of it, with a profit added. Don't you see? Farm Journal.

Arrived With His Clothes On.

When Joshua R. Pheasant, of Mt. Eagle, comes to town, he and Thomas Shaughnessy, who was born in Ireland, usually get together and spin yarns of olden days and reel off all the good stories each has heard since their last meeting. A week or so ago Joshua was in town attending court. Of course, he and Tom soon met and the story-telling was on.

"You're getting old, Pheasant", said Tom.

"I'm not as old as you, Shaughnessy", tartly replied Joshua.

"Why, I'm only seventy-five", remarked Shaughnessy.

"Well, I'm not quite seventy-four", explained Joshua, as he poked his thumb into Shaughnessy's ribs.

"But I've got you beat anyhow, Pheasant", quickly spoke up Shaughnessy.

"And how's that?" queried Joshua.

"I came into this country with my clothes on, and you didn't", answered Shaughnessy, and chuckling to himself he strolled on down the street, leaving Pheasant standing there on the corner to figure it out for himself.

FOUND DEAD IN FIELD

John Nash, Spruce Creek Farmer and Soldier, Dies From Apoplexy.

Last week the venerable John Nash, of Spruce Creek, attended the unveiling of the Pennsylvania monument at Gettysburg and on Friday with other old veterans returned to Tyrone where he spent the afternoon pleasantly with some of his old friends. He left for his home that evening on the 6.10 train and when within a few feet of his home he fell over dead, death resulting from apoplexy, says the Tyrone Herald.

Mr. Nash's family thinking he was a guest of some of his comrades did not worry about his home-coming, but thought sure he would return by Monday. On Tuesday a party of men were passing through a field and found the body of the old soldier lying face downward in the grass. The Huntingdon county coroner was notified and a jury empanelled. Death resulted from unknown causes, was their verdict.

John Nash was born at Franklinville Huntingdon county, about 72 years ago and most all his life was spent in that community with the exception of a few years in Tyrone. When the Civil war broke out he was among the first to enlist in the country's cause and his record while at the front was indeed honorable. He enlisted in June, 1861, in Company I, Fifth P. V. I, and was honorably discharged at the close of enlistment in 1863.

He was a member of the Presbyterian church at Spruce Creek and of the Franklinville Post No. 89, G. A. R.

Surviving to mourn his death are his wife and the following children: Mrs. Porter Deeter, Dungarvin; Mrs. Lloyd Merritts, Bellwood; Mrs. Alex. Ross, Robert, Charles, John and Wilbur all of Tyrone. Two sisters also survive, Mrs. Josephine Gates, Warrior's Mark and Mrs. Mame Shriver, of Osceola.

Silage for Fattening Steers.

A moderate amount of silage fed to attening animals improves the appetite and general health. Some experiments have been made to determine, as far as possible, the feeding value of silage to fattening animals.

At the Pennsylvania Experiment Station when corn silage was compared with corn stover for fattening steers it was found that "the steers fed corn silage made more economical gains than those fed corn stover," and "showed a better coat and more thrifty appearance." These steers were fed broken ear corn and cottonseed meal in connection with the corn silage and corn stover. A liberal silage ration was found to be more economical than a limited one when fed in this manner. The steers getting the largest amount would eat only about 15 pounds of silage per day. The Indiana Experiment Station states that "corn silage may profitably be used as a portion of the ration in finishing steers." "A ration composed of shelled corn, cottonseed meal and corn silage without hay proved to be most efficient ration tested for fattening two-year old steers, as shown by the rate of gain, cost of gain and finish of the cattle. At the Ohio Station, it was found that silage could be used to good advantage in fattening cattle when stover and hay were high in price. No difference in the finish of silage fed and dry fed cattle was apparent.

Recent experiments at other stations seem to give similar results. Silage is each year used more extensively by practical feeders with almost unanimously good results.—From the Correspondence Courses of the Pennsylvania State College.

A Generous And Charitable Wish.

Peruna Secrets You Should Know

Golden Seal, the root of the above plant, is a very useful medicine. Many people gather it in our rich woodlands during the summer. Few people know how valuable it is in dyspepsia, catarrh, and as a general tonic.

Many thousand pounds of this root are used each year in the famous catarrh remedy, Peruna. This fact explains why everybody uses Peruna for catarrh.

Another Kind or Star.

When the sun has gone down and the moon is not yet up, and the stars are coming out one by one, if you go into the meadow, or down the lane you will see another kind of star. This is the glow-worm. Though it is called so, it is not a real worm. It is a kind of grub, with a pale fire, or glow, at the end of its tail. If you take the bug in your hand it cannot harm you. It will walk up and down, all over it, and will cast a glow so that you will be able to see it very well.

LIVED ALMOST A CENTURY

Death of Mrs. Elizabeth Dunn, Clinton County's Oldest Resident.

Mrs. Elizabeth Dunn, the oldest resident of Clinton county, and widow of Judge William Dunn, died at her home on Great Island Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Dunn was born in Nippenose valley on the 18th day of April, 1812, and was the daughter of the late John and Nancy Barber. She lived in that valley until she was twelve years old, when she moved to Cumberland county, where she lived two years. Returning to Jersey Shore she remained there until her nineteenth year, when she moved with her parents to Liberty, Dunstable township, Clinton county, where in 1834 she was married to William Dunn. They began housekeeping on the Dunn farm, where she lived up to the time of her death. They had one son, Washington Dunn, who died in 1877. Her husband died in 1883.

Of Mrs. Dunn the Lock Haven Democrat says: Although in her ninety-ninth year at the time of her death Mrs. Dunn was a remarkably well preserved and intelligent old lady. She had a remarkable memory and was full of anecdotes and incidents of this vicinity dealing with the wilderness, with the wolves and the Indians, and with the later incidents connected with Jerry Church and the founding of Lock Haven.

Mrs. Dunn in point of years and of membership was the oldest member of Great Island Presbyterian church, now located in Lock Haven. She attended the first Sabbath school held in Jersey Shore and was always a faithful student of her Bible.

The funeral services was held from her late residence at Great Island on Saturday at 1 o'clock p. m., and interment made in the old family plot in Dunnstown cemetery, where rest, except in the case of the late Washington Dunn, who lies in Highland cemetery, the successive heads of the Dunn line in this vicinity, which dates back to a time prior to any local chronicle and at that time gave identity to much of the land still owned by the family by the purchase of the same from the Indians, a romantic title afterwards confirmed by the proprietaries.

A NOBLE RED MAN.

He Was Not the Stately Chief Wolseley Expected to Meet.

Lord Wolseley was stationed in Canada many years ago. On one occasion he spent a holiday in the wilds, building a wigwam and practicing generally what we should now call the "back to nature" cure.

It was soon after his arrival in the country, and as the means of communication were still somewhat primitive he had never seen an Indian and was most anxious to make the red man's acquaintance. Some friends of his promised to send one or two to see him, as there was an encampment not very far away.

At last one morning Lord Wolseley was informed that a chief had called to see him. With his mind full of the conventional Indian, a man of commanding presence, arrayed in all the glory of paint and feathers, he eagerly stepped outside his wigwam to make his acquaintance. But he received a rude shock when he found a wizened gentleman dressed in a tattered frock coat and ancient waistcoat.

However, the general stifled his astonishment and played the genial host, although horribly bored at the incessant chatter of the Indian, who had been in the service of the Hudson Bay company and therefore could speak broken English fairly fluently.

At length, anxious to get rid of his visitor, he took a twenty-five cent piece out of his pocket and, fearing he might be grossly insulting his visitor, presented it to him.

The latter took it, looked at it carefully, felt the edges and then said:

"Can you mak' it half dollar?"

THE WET RAIN.

There Are Several Varieties, and All Have Their Whims.

Rain is principally composed of water, but it should not be confused with mining stock.

Rain always comes on Sunday afternoons and wash days.

Wash day may be changed to any day in the week, systematically or indiscriminately, but the rain will come.

Sunday afternoon, however, cannot be changed to any other afternoon. The rain will hold off until you are ready to go driving, and then the word will be passed along the mysterious currents of the air, and a double order of cirrus and cumulus will be hurried in from the west.

Also in the morning, when you leave home and carry your umbrella and raincoat, the rain will go away and sulk. But if you take heart of the fair sky and leave the umbrella and other trimmings then the rain will wait until you leave the office and then get you. Incidentally it will tuck a few grip and rheumatism germs into your system.

Rain is good for the crops, but why it takes you for a crop is hard to understand.

Rain never brought fame to any one except Noah. Probably on the day the flood began he watched the last picnic party drive out of town in a bus, shouting sarcastic things at him through the dust.

There are several varieties of rain, but the one most popular with the weather bureau is called "Probably."—Chicago News.

A Great Assistance.

The millionaire turned around in his plush chair.

"Er—I think you have the advantage of me, young man," he said distantly.

"Why, don't you remember me, sir? I am broke. Two years ago you told me if I ever went broke to come around and see you."

The millionaire beamed a benevolent smile.

"So I did, my son; so I did. Here is the envelope all ready for you."

The young man took the bulky envelope, and his spirits rose like the mercury on a July day.

"Ah, a little assistance, I suppose?"

"No; a great assistance. It is a valuable little pamphlet I wrote during my spare time entitled 'How to Be Broke and Happy.'"—Chicago News.

Persian Shawls.

The "shal" of Kerman—whence our word "shawl"—is made of goats' hair. Like the carpets, the shawl patterns are learned by heart, and the work is even finer. Children also do this work. It is estimated that Kerman turns out $300,000 worth of shawls, handmade, a year. The finest product is a fir cone pattern, a rich color effect, made especially for the governor of the province, who wears it as a robe of honor on the Persian New Year's day.

He Got Her.

"It's so long since you called upon me," said the girl as she came down to the young man in the parlor, "that I was beginning to think you were forgetting me."

"I am for getting you," replied the smart youth, "and that's why I've called tonight. Can I have you?"

A Real Crisis.

"Johnnie, do you understand what is meant by a crisis?"

"Yes, mum."

"Tell us, Johnnie."

"Two out an' the bases full, mum."—Buffalo Express.

AGRICULTURE BY MAIL

State College Offers 33 Correspondence Courses to Farmers.

Farmers and others can probably not put in their leisure during the winter to better advantage than in pursuing some of the Correspondence Courses in Agriculture which are given free by the Pennsylvania State College. These courses will be found benefical for a number of reasons among which may be mentioned the following: first, they furnish information of direct value to the farmer; second, they encourage systematic rather than desultory reading and study; third, they encourage reading to a purpose rather than merely as a pastime; fourth, they stimulate habits of study and experiment, helping the pupil find out things for himself; fifth, they in many cases suggest points bearing on the farm which have not been brought to notice.

Instruction is now given in thirty-three courses covering practically all of the ordinary farm operations including general agriculture or crop production, animal husbandry, dairying, horticulture and the home. A course in Pedagogy of Agriculture is also given primarily for teachers. Those interested should write to the Department of Agricultural Education, State College, Pa., for catalogue of the Correspondence Courses and enrollment blank. The tuition is free there being no fees whatever connected with the courses.

The Crops.

The corn crop is now safe from frosts, and general opinion now inclines to a yield of fully 3,000,000,000 bushels, says Bradstreets's Report. Shortages in acre yields in Ohio, Nebraska, Kansas, and other states are offset by increased area. The long warm fall has helped to mature late cotton. In southern Texas and in the Memphis district yields are better than earlier looked for. Except for boll weevil damage, the crop in the lower Mississippi valley looks good. Mixed reports come from Georgia. Good prices are being paid for the crop. North Carolina farmers are reported getting 14 cents. The Virginia peanut crop is a good one. The Maryland tomato crop is a short one, due to drought. The pack is smaller than normal. Canned goods generally are higher in price. An active demand for an excellent apple crop is reported from eastern Washington.

Miss Miller a Bride.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized Thursday evening, last, in the United Evangelical parsonage when Miss Mary, M. Miller, a daughter of Reuben Miller, became the bride of Robert Thomas, now of Pitcairn but formerly a resident of Bellefonte. The ceremony was performed by the bride's pastor, Rev. J. F. Hower. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas expect to make their home at Pitcairn. They have the best wishes of a host of admiring friends.

Bean in Child's Nose.

Elizabeth, the five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Moore, of Huntingdon, met with a novel, although painful, experience one day last week. A small bean became lodged in the child's nose and for a time all efforts to remove it were in vain. The bean began to swell and it was found necessary to summon a physician to dislodge it.

Refrigerator Barge Service.

In order to facilitate the handling of dressed meats, provisions and other perishable freight in New York harbor, the Pennsylvania Railroad has inaugurated a refrigerator barge service. This innovation was adopted after much experimenting as to the best method of handling this character of traffic where it is impracticable to make delivery in the original car and where the company must furnish protection against heat in summer and cold in winter. Ordinarily this protection has been afforded by refrigerator cars. The situation at the port of New York, however, differs from other Atlantic ports in that steamships have no rail connections at their piers, and freight must be delivered by floats. It was to supply this need that the Pennsylvania Railroad inaugurated its refrigerator barge service.

Stand By Your Guns!

John K. Tener, the Republican nominee for Governor, has been made the target for a villainous personal attack by a Philadelphia newspaper which is the chief supporter of the Berry—Gibboney hippodrome. The purpose of the attack is to drive Mr. Tener off the Republican ticket. But a few weeks before the election the newspaper in question engages in sensational charges, hoping thereby to frighten Mr. Tener, force his withdrawal and thus make possible the election of Berry.

This is the hour of the campaign for Republicans to stand by their guns. The Republican party in Pennsylvania has the battle won. Now is the time to hold the fort.

We have every confidence in Mr. Tener's integrity, his honesty and his good faith as between man and man. When elected to Congress he passed through what was the bitterest congressional fight ever known in this State. He emerged from that fight without a blemish, because it was fought in his home community and where he was among those who knew him best.

Sensational charges, personal vilification and slanderous statements are the weapons of those trying to stab Mr. Tener in the back. They have been the weapons of the same crew of political pirates in past campaigns and they have never won success.

The American people demand honorable warfare. They demand that if men must fight that they fight face to face and out in the open. They will never give their approval to those who fight in the dark, whose only achievement is one of tearing down and who parade under the cloak of reform that they may come into political control.

Mr. Tener has been made a victim of abuse, just as has virtually every Republican candidate in Pennsylvania in a decade. That he will emerge from this campaign, unscathed and stronger than before, is our confident prediction.

When the enemy advances, that is the hour for Republicans to stand loyally by their guns, refuse to haul down the flag and then fight on to splendid victory.

From the moment Charles E. Patton entered the field as an aspirant for Congress he has been a popular candidate with the people of the Twenty-first Congressional district. His magnificent victory at the primaries attested his popularity and demonstrated the extent to which he is trusted and admired by the people of Centre, Clearfield, Cameron and McKean counties. Each day of the campaign finds him looming up, stronger and stronger, winning new friends and establishing for himself a most favorable impression upon the public mind. All indications are that he will continue to grow in popular favor and that on November 8 he will be elected by an overwhelming majority.

Centre County wants just such a man as Mr. Patton in Congress. He is young, able, fearless, willing to work and endowed with a broad conception of the wants and needs of his constituents. He is justly proud of his candidacy, which is the best guarantee to the people that he takes pride in having their good will and confidence. As a successful business man he will exert himself to safeguard the interests of business men at home. As a man of the people, and that is what Mr. Patton is, in every sense of the word, he will be richly fortified to represent them as they deserve to be represented.

Mr. Patton is conducting his campaign with dignity and at the same time meeting voters face to face, showing himself just as he is and standing squarely upon his own feet. Everywhere he has been in Centre County he has been cordially received and assured of loyal support. It is becoming more apparent with each day that the people of Centre County have made up their mind that he is the type of man they want and will vote for to represent them at Washington.

PUT DELINQUENTS ON ONE LIST FOR ALL

County Publishers Meet Conditions Created by Postal Rules

ARE FORCED TO ACT

Drastic Measures Made Necessary by Regulation Prohibiting Mailing of Papers to Persons in Arrears More Than 12 Months.

Following up their action of several weeks ago, when they met to consider new conditions created by stringent orders from the Post Office Department, in regard to delinquent subscribers, the publishers of the several Centre County newspapers held a meeting in Bellefonte on Monday morning and effected a permanent organization.

The several newspapers represented at the meeting were the "Gazette," "Centre Democrat," "Democratic Watchman," "Millheim Journal," and "The Republican." The State College "Times," Centre Hall "Reporter," Howard "Hustler" and the "Bellefonte Daily" were not represented in person, but sent word that they approved of the formal action taken.

Reports submitted showed that all of the newspapers in the county have received orders from Washington that newspapers may not be mailed to persons owing more than twelve months subscription. The reports also showed that each newspaper had been compelled to remove from its list a large number of delinquenc subscribers. Comparison of these several lists showed that in many instances the same persons owed not only one but two and three newspapers.

For the mutual protection of the publishers and in order that justice might be done the great majority of newspaper readers who pay for their newspapers, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Whereas, The United States Post Office Department, at Washington, D. C., has positively prohibited the mailing of weekly newspapers to subscribers more than twelve months in arrears at the 2nd class rate; and

WHEREAS, Violation of this order of the Post Office Department means that the offending newspaper or newspapers will be denied the use of the United States mails; and

WHEREAS, This regulation of the Post Office Department has now forced every newspaper in Centre County to remove from its list a large number of delinquent subscribers, many of whom owe subscriptions to several of the newspapers of Centre County; therefore, be it,

RESOLVED, That the Newspaper Publishers' Association of Centre County compile a list showing the names of persons owing subscriptions to newspapers in the county and the number of newspapers to which they are indebted, and that a copy of this list be furnished to each newspaper for its protection; and be it further,

RESOLVED, That any person whose name is on this general list of delinquent subscribers and who pays his or her indebtedness to such newspaper or newspapers, will be guaranteed that such payment will be promptly reported to the Newspaper Publishers' Association of Centre County and the name in question immediately removed from said delinquent list.

The meaning of the foregoing resolution is simply this: One list is now being prepared which will show the name of every person who owes any newspaper in Centre County. This list will also show how much the delinquent owes and also how many newspapers he or she may owe. A copy of this list will be at once furnished every newspaper publisher in Centre County so that he may tell at a glance who are in arrears at any office.

This list will necessarily contain the names of many persons who are perfectly honest and well meaning but who have, through carelessness, neglected to pay for their newspaper. It will also contain the names of many persons who are perfectly honest and well meaning, but who do not happen to have the ready money to pay their honest debts. And then, the list will also contain the names of the great army of "dead beats," that class of readers who never pay, or intend to pay, for their newspapers.

It is to weed out the "dead beats" that the publishers have decided to prepare a general delinquent list. Any subscriber to "The Republican," who through carelessness or because he has not happened to have the ready money on a particular day to pay his arrears, can square himself with the publisher and have his name promptly removed from the delinquent list. The publisher of "The Republican" stands ready, 365 days in the year, to go half way in meeting and protecting a subscriber who is honest, who wants to and who means to pay but who has been unfortunate and does not happen to have the ready money to pay at once.

The general delinquent list is primarily aimed at the "dead beat." It is intended to stop the practice of the "dead beat" from beating one newspaper, then becoming a subscriber to another newspaper and finally beating that one and thus making a round of all the newspapers, getting a year or more subscription out of each one of them and not paying a penny during the entire time. It is also intended to head off the scamp who beats "The Republican," for instance, and then brazenly walks uptown and by paying one year in advance expects to pave the way for beating the "Watchman," or the "Centre Democrat" or the "Gazette." Some of those subscribers who have beat "The Republican" now are subscribers to other newspapers and will beat them, too, if afforded the slightest chance. The compiling of this general delinquent list is to prevent "dead beats" having this chance in the future.

As matters now stand, every newspaper office in Centre County is fortified with a list showing who DO NOT PAY FOR THEIR NEWSPAPERS. As others may become delinquent their names, too, will be placed on the list.

The best and surest way to make certain that a name is never placed on the delinquent list is to make it a strict practice to pay for your newspaper in advance.

Do You Want Hard Times?

In a public address a few days ago Champ Clark, Democratic leader of the House, presented a forecast of what the Democrats propose to do when they come into power. "First," he said, "they will reduce the tariff to a revenue basis." Mr. Clark can speak with authority respecting the plans of his party. If the Democrats control the House in the next Congress he, undoubtedly, will be elected Speaker, and in that position will direct the enactment of legislation.

What the Democratic Party really proposes to do is reduce the tariff, not to a revenue basis, but to a free trade basis. You readily will recall what happened the last time the Democratic Party engaged in tariff reduction.

The country was deceived into electing a Democratic House of Representatives in Congress in 1890, and two years later the other branch of Congress and the Presidency was secured by the Democrats. Falsehood and trickery had done their work.

With the whole power of legislation thus placed in the control of the Democratic Party, a panic ensued. It did not wait for the party to legislate. The Democrats assailed the Republican policy of protection, as they now, and as they always have done. Their declared purpose was to reduce duties and to uproot the whole system. They then had the power.

The menace was enough to cause the greatest distress. Business was suspended, manufactories closed up, failures were numerous and hundreds of thousands of working men were thrown out of employment. A period of suffering ensued which has hardly had its parallel in the history of the country. It can never be forgotton by any of the sufferers who passed through it.

Under such conditions of business and industrial depression the Democrats enacted their threatened tariff law. It not only did not help, it made matters worse. The Democratic tariff was neither a revenue measure nor a business act. The country continued to suffer until William McKinley, the author of the Republican tariff law which has been so viciously misrepresented, was elected President in 1896.

With a Republican President and a Republican Congress the country entered upon a period of prosperity which has been the wonder of all other lands. Business activity was resumed everywhere and in all lines of industry, and that activity has been continued under Republican tariff legislation, which has never failed to provide protection both for the manufacturer and the wage-earner.

Do you want hard times again?

Harry Murtorff Surprised.

Through the ingenuity of his clever wife, Harry Murtorff was the guest of honor at a delightful birthday surprise party, on Monday evening, last. The day marked his twenty-fifth birthday anniversary, and so far as he could figure out Mrs. Murtorff was anything but enthusiastic over the fact. Beyond prodding him a little over the fact that he was merely one year older than he was last year, she had little to say. In fact, Harry had about concluded that as a birthday it was a rank failure and that he would be glad when it would be over. That night, however, things were different, for when he arrived home it was to find there to greet him a number of jolly friends, who had been quietly invited by Mrs. Murtorff to be on hand and aid in making it a complete surprise. All present were royally entertained and the evening was a complete success. Those on hand included Sidney Keifer, David Washburn, Wilbur Burkholder, Van Jodon and Misses Keturah Rider, Grace Blackford, Mary Conley, Bernice Nolan, Nora Loveland, Inez Cronemiller, Lottie Robb, Emma Waite and Mr. and Mrs. Murtorff.

Grim Coming to Town.

According to the Philadelphia newspapers of Monday, last, Senator Webster Grim, the Democratic nominee for Governor, will visit Bellefonte and State College on Monday, October 17. He is scheduled to deliver an address to the students at State College and later come to Bellefonte. His appearance here will be under the auspices of the Democratic County Committee.

MRS. MARIA DICK RHOADS

Prominent Bellefonte Resident Dies After Lingering Illness.

After an illness that had extended over a period of several weeks, Mrs. Maria Dick Rhoads, widow of the late Judge Daniel Rhoads, died on Thursday afternoon, last, at 1.49 o'clock, at her late home, on West Linn Street. It was known to the community that her illness was of serious character and that she was extremely weak, but the brave fight she was making to live had encouraged her many friends to believe that she would recover, so that the news of her death was a shock to all. About one week prior to her death she suffered a sinking spell and gradually becoming weaker, on Thursday, at the hour named, she closed her eyes in eternal sleep.

Funeral services were held on Saturday afternoon, at 4 o'clock, conducted by Rev. Dr. A. M. Schmidt, pastor of the Reformed Church. Interment was made in the Friends' cemetery, the casket bearers being old time neighbors and friends of the family.

Deceased was a daughter of Edward Smith, who was a native of Salem, New Jersey, and who, while a civil engineer by profession, was prominent in public life and at one time represented his district in the New Jersey Legislature. He subsequently removed to Mt. Carmel, Illinois, where his daughter, Maria, was born, in 1839. She received a thorough education and when 21 years of age she was married to Daniel Rhoads, who was one of the substantial men of this community and whose name will always be associated with the history of Bellefonte. Surviving are three children: Miss Rebecca Naomi and Edward K., at home, and Joseph James, at Altoona.

MISS LIZZIE MEYERS.

At 3 o'clock on Sunday morning after a week's illness from constipation of the bowels, Miss Lizzie Meyers died at her home, at State College. Deceased was born in Dauphin County, November 4, 1832, and was a daughter of the late George and Anna Fox Meyers, pioneer settlers of Pine Hall. When Mr. Meyers located there the farm now owned by F. W. Krumrine was all timber land. In her youth Miss Meyers joined the Reformed church and remained steadfast to its teachings to the time of her death. Surviving to mourn her loss are W. C. Meyers, of State College, and Henry Meyers, of Boalsburg. Miss Meyers was a splendid woman, endowed with a genial disposition. She was a devout Christian, living a good life and taking pleasure in a faithful effort to make comfortable the last days of her aged parents. Burial was made on Tuesday, at 2 o'clock, in the Boalsburg cemetery. Rev. Dr. A. M. Schmidt, of Bellefonte, officiated, assisted by Rev. Mr. Sasserman, of State College.

MRS. EMMA JACKSON.

Mrs. Emma Jackson, who for a number of years was employed in the home of the late Dr. Hale, died very suddenly, on Friday evening, last, while seated in the office of Dr. W. W. Feidt, on High Street. Funeral services were held on Monday. She became ill while walking in the street and stepping into his office, asked to see Dr. Feidt. It was while the latter was preparing some medicine for her that she expired, death being due to heart failure. Deceased was formerly Emma Hamer, marrying John Jackson, who died several years ago. She was highly respected among her circle of friends and was a woman with many splendid qualities. Surviving is one son, Benjamin, who makes his home in Philadelphia.

MRS. HENRIETTA BRYAN.

Mrs. Henrietta, wife of Samuel Bryan, of Milesburg, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Adam Schroyer, at that place, early Tuesday morning. She had been ill for some time, being afflicted with paralysis. Deceased was aged 69 years, was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and was a daughter of the late Edward Tate. Surviving are a husband and the following children: Elber and Edward, of Curtin; Samuel, of Bellefonte; Mrs. Adam Schroyer, of Milesburg; Mrs. Harry Cox, of Nealmont, and Mrs. Adam Crossmyer, of Cleveland, Ohio. Funeral services were held this (Thursday) morning, at 10 o'clock, with interment at Curtin.

PHOEBE C. QUAY.

Phoebe C. Quay, the 14-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Quay, of Howard, died at the home of her parents on Tuesday morning at 5 o'clock from typhoid fever. The young lady had been ill only a few days, and when a physician was called he at once expressed doubts of her recovery. She leaves to mourn her untimely death her parents, five sisters and two brothers. The funeral took place today and burial was made at Marsh Creek.

JOHN W. SNEDDEN.

John W. Snedden, of Falls Creek, formerly of Philipsburg, died last week at Cambridge Springs, from Bright's disease. Surviving are a widow and mother and the following sisters and brothers: Mrs. Wm. ROY HOCKENBURY.

Roy Hockenbury, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hockenbury, of Nigh Bank, died on Monday after an extended illness. His death was due to typhoid fever. Deceased was aged about 22 years.

Lost Child Is Found.

returned to the house. Glancing about the room he casually inquired where their child was, and like a flash it dawned upon Mrs. Packer that the boy had not been with his father and that he had wandered off and had been lost. Rushing out into the darkness, mother and father vainly called and searched in the immediate territory. The few persons to be reached at that hour of the night were hailed and pressed into service in a thorough search for the missing child. Throughout the night Mr. Packer continued scouring the woods, but when daylight had come there still was no trace of his boy.

With the breaking of the dawn every neighbor for miles about was summoned by telephone or by messenger. Searchers went out into the woods in all directions. One after another of the party returned, empty-handed. At 9 o'clock on Monday morning the searchers realized that they could not find the child. Spurred on by the distress of the grief-stricken mother, they continued the search, each one of the silent party fearing that the child was already dead from exhaustion and exposure.

Then came the glad news that the lost had been found. From the moment the boy was placed in his arms at the Confer home, one mile distant, Mr. Tanyer lost no time in getting to the little house where Mrs. Packer lay, hoping against hope and sobbing out a prayer for the return of her child.

"Here he is," called out Mr. Tanyer, as he strode into the yard and on up the steps into the house. Rushing to meet him, Mrs. Packer seized the child in her arms and as she wept for joy, she collapsed. When she was revived, her first question was whether it was true that her child was home again. There were tears in the eyes of all present as they looked on and witnessed the greeting between mother and child.

Unionville.

On Thursday evening, October 6, an event took place which was greatly enjoyed by every one present, it being the fifteenth anniversary of the birthday of Miss Elizabeth Musser, a prominent and popular young lady of this place. At 8 o'clock about 25 of her friends walked into her home and took Miss Elizabeth completely by surprise. After receiving congratulations on the happy event Miss Musser inspected the many presents. Ice cream, cake and candy were served, all present doing justice to the same, after which games of all kinds were played. All reported a most enjoyable time. Those present were: Misses Ruth Parsons, Ruth Summers, Beatrice Stere, Margaret Eckenroth, Margaret Brugger, Helen Moran, Mary Lansberry, Lulu Moran, Mannie Snook, Elsie Kerchner, Millie Kerchner and Messrs John Stevenson, George Moran, Charles Holt, Ralph Moran, Hassel Stere, Laird Morrison, Clark Emerick, Irvin Holt, John Rhown, George Parsons, Boyd Irwin, Ray Snook, Charles Fetterman and Patterson Holt.

Some persons thought they were going to Snow Shoe Intersection, but we afterward learned they went to Lock Haven, where they met two of our prominent young ladies, Miss Pauline Smith and Miss Martha Zahniser, who were on their way home from Port Allegheny. Needless to say, the young ladies arrived safely at home. We will not give away their escorts this time, but the next time they try to fool us their names will be published.

"BACK TO THE FARM"

XIII.—Rural Education—The District School.

By C. V. GREGORY.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

NINETY per cent of all the country boys and girls never get any education beyond that given them in the country schoolhouse. Obviously the problem of education for country life is the problem of the district school.

The problem of the increasing cost of living is not so much to be solved by raising more corn and hogs as it is by raising better boys and girls. A crop of boys and girls brought up to love the country and appreciate its possibilities will do much to postpone the coming of the day when the United States will be too big to feed itself.

There are too few real country schools in the United States today. There are too many imitations of town schools. Too many of the teachers are girls from town. They come out on Monday morning and go back on Friday night. They have none of the spirit of the country, and they endure the country school for the meager wages they receive. They are longing for the day when they may get positions in town schools.

While this condition exists the rural school cannot be a success. If the country is to have a life of its own, as it already has in many localities, that life must be most manifest in the school. The fault is not primarily with the teacher, but with the system. The chief fault with the rural schools is that there are too many of them. In Iowa there are 278 schools with fewer than five pupils each. There are 2,353 schools with an average of fewer than ten pupils. The schools have been established with the idea of numbers rather than quality. There is a schoolhouse every two miles with monotonous regularity, whether there are any pupils or not. Under such conditions a large share of the school funds is used in maintaining the small schools. The result is cheap teachers, poor schoolhouses and meager equipment.

GOOD JUDGES OF CORN

The most advanced rural communities are getting around this difficulty by consolidation. In some places two schools are brought together, in others three or four or half a dozen. One good, well equipped schoolhouse takes the place of several poor ones. Fewer teachers are needed, and the money can be used to hire better ones. A plot of ground can be purchased for a school garden, and the schoolhouse can have trees and a lawn.

Local pride has been one of the obstacles in the way of consolidation. The patrons of a school district dislike to have their schoolhouse taken away even though there are but two or three pupils of school age in the district. Local pride is a commendable thing. There is just as much local pride in a consolidated district, but it is a little wider in its scope. The pride based upon a modern consolidated school has much more foundation than the pride that objects to having a dilapidated, poorly attended schoolhouse removed.

The question of getting pupils to and from school has been a troublesome one in some localities. The coming of better roads is doing much to solve that. Even in the largest consolidated school districts the bulk of the pupils are within two or three miles of the schoolhouse. Often stables are provided near the schoolhouse, where the pupils from the corners of the district can keep their horses. More often the children are hauled in covered wagons at the expense of the district.

The consolidated rural schools are developing a system of education all their own. They are no longer imitators of the city schools. They are of the country and for the country. Objection has been made to the introduction of agriculture into the rural schools on the ground that the courses are already crowded. There is some ground for this objection in the old fashioned district school. In the consolidated school better grading is possible, the pupils learn a thing well when they go over it, and endless repetition is unnecessary. Every one who has attended a district school remembers the endless routine of selections in the reader, which must be gone over time and again until they could almost be read without looking at the book. Arithmetic was much the same. Often there was a new teacher each term, and she went on the principle that the advanced class should be put back to fractions to start with. History was another endless circle. Geography was a list of towns and seas to be memorized.

In the consolidated school the work is systematized and made more thorough. The time saved can go to some of the newer branches which relate to agriculture. It is not the actual agriculture taught in these schools that makes them the most effective, however. It is the spirit of the farm that is injected into the other studies. The modern arithmetic has lost most of its ponderous and imaginary problems. Instead the problems deal with the price of corn and cattle, with the figuring of a balanced ration and with the profit on a field of corn. Physiology has been broadened. The digestion of animals is studied, together with the digestion of man. The girl learns the need of a balanced ration for people at the same time that her brother is learning the necessity of the same kind of ration for stock. The principles that underlie both are the same.

Geography deals with products more than with places. The pupils learn where the various articles of commerce come from and why each country is adapted by nature to certain industries. The boy takes added interest in his class when he learns that the binding twine that is used for his father's binder comes from the Philippine Islands or that most of the sugar he eats on his bread at lunchtime comes from the German beet fields. The details of land formation are studied in the streams and hills of the school district, and a study of soils is brought in at the same time. These outdoor excursions add to the interest of the work and quicken the children's power of observation.

When all the time necessary has been given to the routine studies there is still plenty left. A little botany can be given. The pupils can study the forms of flowers and plants and the mystery of growing things. Usually the school has a garden of ample size. Here the pupils can spend part of the time in summer, when the pleasant weather makes the study of books irksome. They can study the different seeds and plants at first hand and learn things from this close observation which they never could obtain from books. In the spring before work in the garden is possible germination boxes can be started indoors and the beginning of the life of the plant studied. Often a small shop and a few tools are provided, and the boys are taught to saw and plane and hammer to some effect.

The success of this modern district school education has been proved beyond a doubt. One of the foremost localities in the country in this movement is Page county, Ia. The work began there in 1907 under the leadership of Miss Jessie Field, a county superintendent, whose motto, "We believe in the country boys and girls," has become famous the country over. Page county set to work to give the country boys and girls a better chance. One of Miss Field's first acts was to distribute a large number of tulip bulbs to all the schools in the county. In making the flower beds and planting the bulbs the children became interested in growing things. They became interested in improving the school grounds and the schoolhouse.

The teachers of Page county are interested in rural schools. During the past year several of the rural schoolteachers refused positions in town at higher salaries. They were too deeply interested in the rural work to forsake it. With a teacher like that a school cannot help but be successful. The patrons are coming to appreciate these teachers, too, and are giving them better salaries, more equipment and more moral support.

The county superintendent bought a Babcock tester and sent it around from one school to another. The boys learned to test milk, and their fathers learned that some of their cows were not so good as they had thought. The boys were taught to judge corn and to make germination boxes for testing seed corn. They learned to pick out one weed seed from another and which were the most to be feared.

TYPICAL RURAL SCHOOL, BARE AND CHEERLESS.

At the national corn show in Omaha in 1908 Miss Field won the automobile that was awarded to the best rural school exhibit. Miss Field, several of her teachers and some of the brightest boys in the county attended the short course at the agricultural college in 1909. "I find that I've got to learn more about corn," Miss Field said. "My boys are getting ahead of me." She did so well that she won an expert judge's certificate. Her boys won the seventy-five dollar gold medal that was given for the best boys' judging team in the state. Her teachers went back with new ideas to put into effect.

TEACHING TELEGRAPHY

Pennsylvania Railroad Wants Students at its Bedford School.

In an effort to increase the interest in its Telegraph School at Bedford, Pa., the Pennsylvania Railroad has sent broadcast a pamphlet describing the work which it is doing in the institution. The number of students enrolled up to September first of this year was 243, of which number 151 have graduated and are now employed as telegraphers. The railroad expects to increase this number materially by its campaign.

The students at the Bedford school are taught practical railroading. The regular railroad telegraph wires are run through the school and train orders and telegrams are received and transmitted in the same way as is done in regular practice. An automatic sending machine, with a transmitter that can be set at any speed has been installed in the school. This machine is used to teach the students to receive messages, and as it transmits at a uniform speed, it is of great advantage. The school is equipped with a library, as well as a miniature railroad with a perfect block signal system. In addition to learning telegraphy the students are taught the duties of station agents in order that they may be prepared to take charge of stations immediately upon graduation.

In view of the use of the telephone in train dispatching on the Pennsylvania Railroad, the latest innovation at the Bedford school is a course in dispatching trains by telephone. The Pennsylvania Railroad now uses the telephone on a number of its branch lines as well as on the Low Grade freight line.

In the pamphlet which the railroad has just issued it is announced that the school of telegraphy was established for the purpose of educating young men to become telegraph or telephone operators, and, to make it as easy as possible, only a nominal fee is charged. Students graduate in from six to eight months, and, as the pamphlet states, "all graduates are given positions on the Pennsylvania Railroad, with the assurance that if they are faithful in the discharge of their duties, they will have steady employment, and will be placed in line for promotion to higher positions."

Treating Infested Orchards.

There has been considerable inquiry, at the office of the Division of Zoology, of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, as to whether any provision has been made by the State for the treatment of orchards.

To one of these inquiries, Prof. H. A. Surface, State Zoologist, replied as follows:

"The State has made provision for the inspection of orchards, and I have inspectors under my direction now operating in thirty different counties. There are no provisions for the treatment of orchards by the State. It is supposed that the owner will do this. However, legal provision has been made that if a person should neglect his trees until the pests on them become a menace to neighbors' property, anyone can take steps toward having him compelled to give his trees treatment, by notifying the Secretary of Agriculture of the condition of affairs, and requesting that the trees be inspected, and that the owner be made to treat them. After this is once started in this way, it is the duty of the Secretary of Agriculture to see that the orchard is inspected; the owner is notified of the condition of his trees, and the pests that are upon them, and also informed of the proper method of treatment. He is given a certain time within which to treat them by the method outlined by the inspector, and if this is not done by this method in the proper manner within a specified time, they will be treated by the Department at his expense, or destroyed, according to their condition and value, and the judgment of the experts in charge of the work."

Old Railroad Time Table.

In tearing out a partition between the office and the hall at the Ward House recently in the course of further improvements, E. S. Shaffer, the genial clerk at that popular hostelry, while watching the progress of the carpenters, picked a number of old papers from behind the plastering, says the Tyrone Times. Among them was a railroad schedule, adopted November 22, 1868, of the Pennsylvania Central railroad. According to the schedule there were but two trains each way per day at that time. The west-bound passenger trains at that time consumed six hours and five minutes and seven hours and twenty-five minutes between Harrisburg and Altoona, respectively, and a little short of that amount of the east bound. The Bald Eagle branch is also scheduled on an opposite page. George C. Wilkins was superintendent at that time. Trains left Tyrone for Lock Haven at 8.50 a. m. and 7 p. m., and returned at 1.20 p. m. and 6.05 p. m. the next day.

"It Beats All"

This is quoted from a letter of M. Stockwell, Hannibal, Mo. "I recently used Foley's Honey and Tar for the first time. To say I am pleased dose not half express my feelings. It beats all the remedies I ever used. I contracted a bad cold and was threatened with pneumonia. The first doses gave great relief and on bottle completely cured me." Contain no opiates. Sold by C. A SOLAR PLEXUS FOR BERRY BOOM

Many Independents in Philadelphia Fail to Register.

HE WILL BE THIRD IN RACE

Republicans Make a Big Showing in Registration in the Quaker City, Insuring a Great Majority.

[Special Correspondence.]

Philadelphia, Oct. 11.

If at ony time there was any doubt about Philadelphia giving a record-breaking majority for John K. Tener for governor and his colleagues on the Republican ticket, that doubt has been dispelled.

Since the returns of the personal registration of voters have been received there can be no question about there being an overwhelming Republican majority recorded in the Quaker City on Nov. 8.

The records from the wards show a complete collapse of the so-called reform movement.

What was anticipated when Berry was placed at the head of the Keystone Party ticket has come to pass. Independent Republicans by the thousands have refused to support this Bryanite for governor and have come out squarely for the full Republican ticket. Others who have been affiliated with independent parties have simply taken to the woods. They have declared themselves out of the campaign. That fact was manifested in every independent stronghold in this city on the three registration days. This class of voters did not register. No amount of persuasion from Keystone Party workers could induce them to go out to register. They said they were still independents, but that they could not go along with the Berry candidacy.

While the independent vote cut a small figure in the registration in Philadelphia, the regular Republicans were active in every ward, and they succeeded in rolling up a phenomenal registration.

Upon the circulation of reports that this is a Democratic year and that there is a bright outlook for the election of a Democratic president, the Democratic regulars got their workers busy and claim to have at least 50,000 straight Democrats registered who will all vote for Grim.

Berry a Poor Third.

In therefore reviewing the registration figures in Philadelphia, with Tener getting an extraordinary large vote and with Grim getting a big percentage of the Democratic vote, there is not much left for Berry, who is destined to be a poor third in the race in this city.

The Berry registration was small, not only on account of the hostility to his candidacy among influential men among the reformers, and especially the men who have been the heaviest contributors to their campaign funds, but because the Berry movement lacks organization.

In hundreds of precincts there was not a solitary Berry watcher on any of the registration days. This in many cases can be accounted for by the lack of funds in the Berry campaign treasury. Reform workers, like those of the regular parties, are human. They will not give up a day's work for nothing, and as the Berry boomers had nothing to give, there was nothing doing in the way of manning the polls on the three days set apart for registration.

Republicans Very Active.

The same feeling of lack of confidence in Berry, if not actual hostility to his theories and methods, that impelled thousands of independents to remain away from the polls on registration day, has inspired stalwart Republicans to action and prompted many to take an aggressive part in the state campaign in favor of the full Republican ticket.

There is evidence on every hand of the determination of old line Republicans, business men, manufacturers and others identified with the commercial and industrial prosperity of this city, to do every thing in their power to roll up a big majority for John K. Tener for governor and all the candidates on the Republican ticket. The fact that the Democratic combine that is running the Keystone Party has seen fit to indorse a large number of Democratic candidates for congress, who are now running on the Keystone Party ticket headed by Berry for governor, has incensed the great body of the citizenship which believes in the administration of President Taft, and which recognizes the fact that the election of a Democratic congress means the reopening of the tariff agitation and an inevitable disruption of business throughout the country, the shutting down of mills and factories of all kinds, the throwing of hundreds of thousands of men and women out of employment, and untold distress and ruin to many.

With this possible condition in mind, the members of the Union League have appointed a committee of one hundred to cooperate with the Republican party leaders in the state and the nation to combat every effort to elect Democrats to congress.

In full accord with this action, the Workingmen's Protective Tariff League, a powerful organization composed of large numbers of employes of the textile mills of Kensington, has adopted resolutions strongly commending the Taft administration, declaring for the election of Republicans to congress, and coming out squarely in favor of the election of John K. Tener for governor of Pennsylvania.

A committee composed of representative men employed in the various mills has been named to canvass the wage earners of Philadelphia to insure a large vote for all the candidates on the Republican ticket.

Through Henry F. Walton, chairman of the Republican state committee, who is in touch with these committees, these elements are acting in harmony, and give assurances that the returns on election night will demonstrate that effective work has been done.

W. Harry Baker, secretary of the Republican state committee, who has been surveying the situation in the interior of the state, reports that there are signs of Republican activity on every hand and that splendid results may be anticipated from the party strongholds in every section.

A Teacher In the Making.

She was a popular young normal student who had been to a party the night before, and as a consequence was "not prepared" in the geography class. The woman instructor, true to her method of drawing upon the general knowledge of a student rather than to permit a failure, after eliciting two or three inconsequential "stabs" from her fair but jaded disciple, asked for the products of China.

The victim brightened. "Tea," she asserted, preparing to sit down.

"Yes, and what else?" encouraged the instructor.

The young woman smiled with sweet hopelessness.

"Now you can mention others, I am sure. Just think about it."

"Tea," drawled the flutelike voice of the pretty girl, "and," puckering her forehead with an intellectual tour de force, "and laundry work."—Youth's Companion.

Quick Cure.

Once there was a man who made life miserable for all he met by eternally harping about his aches and pains.

He would discourse on the subject of his dyspepsia, and he would almost interrupt a religious service to tell of his rheumatic symptoms.

If he had a stitch in his side he had to pester his friends with it, and a headache helped him make everybody unhappy.

At last a bright young woman, to whom the man applied for sympathy, cured him of all his ailments.

When he was in the midst of a catalogue of his sufferings she said sweetly:

"Yes, it is strange how many of these things afflict a man as he begins to grow old."

That man never even had a symptom after that.—Wilbur D. Nesbit in Judge.

When Men Were Branded.

A curious relic of bygone times, probably the only one in England, still stands at Lancaster castle. It is a strong iron holdfast, into which the prisoner, who in olden time had been sentenced to be branded as a malefactor, had his hand thrust and locked. The branding iron after being made red hot at the end was pressed against the "brawne of the thumb," and on being withdrawn the letter M branded on the unfortunate prisoner's flesh indicated from henceforward that he was a malefactor. The ceremony was performed in the presence of the judge and jury and in open court, and the brander invariably turned to the judge after he had done his work and exclaimed, "A fair mark, my lord!" It is over 100 years since the instrument was last used on two men sentenced to imprisonment for manslaughter.

His Maiden Speech.

It is related that when the Earl of Rochester in the reign of Charles II. rose to make his maiden speech in the house of lords he said: "My lords—my lords, I rise this time for the first time—the very first time. My lords, I divide my speech into four branches." Here there was an embarrassing pause of some seconds. "My lords," the earl then ejaculated, "if ever I rise again in this house you may cut me off, root and branches and all, forever."

The Devil's Sonata.

Tartini, the great violinist, after dining indiscreetly, dreamed that he had made a bargain with the devil for his soul. To prove his powers the evil one seized a violin and played a sonata of exquisite beauty. Tartini awoke with the ringing in his ears, committed the music to paper and published it as "The Devil's Sonata."

The Verdict.

"How did your act take amateur night?"

"Great! When I sang the first verse they yelled 'Fine!' and when I sang the next they yelled 'Imprisonment!'"—Baltimore Sun.

His Main Want.

Earnest but Prosy Street Corner Orator—I want land reform, I want housing reform, I want educational reform, I want— Bored Voice—Chloroform.—Manchester Guardian.

Proud of It.

The Lady—Poor tramp! Have you anything in your life to be proud of? The Hobo—Yessum. I never beat nobody out of no laundry bill.—Cleveland Leader.

Give, if thou canst, an alms; if not, afford instead of that a sweet and gentle word.—Robert Herrick.

Wouldn't Deny Identity.

A characteristic figure in the politics of the middle west once ran for congress from the state of Ohio. His free and easy manners made him popular with the boys, but his life had not been irreproachable, and from many quarters came evidence of opposition. This opposition crystallized finally at a meeting of the Ministers' league of the district, and a delegation was sent to ascertain beyond question the truth or falsity of the charges against him.

Though the object of their visit was known to the candidate he received the ministers with a hearty greeting, and stood before them smiling, while their chairman, a man of serious mien, unburdened himself of the questions previously agreed on.

"Mr. Blank," said the chairman, unctiously, "are you the man who has been seen frequenting race tracks? Are you the man famous in this community for your devotion to games of chance played for money? Mr. Blank, are you the man whose notorious immorality has for years been a blot upon this town and a shame, to all its honest citizens? Are you the man we have described, Mr. Blank?"

The statesman's eye twinkled as the catechism was concluded.

"Gentlemen," he said, returning to courteous gravity. "I am that identical son of a sea cook."

Sell Newspapers By Machine.

Street cars in St. Louis and Louisville, Ky., are being equipped with automatic newspaper vending machines for the convenience of passengers on "pay as you enter" cars.

The machine, which is the work of fourteen years' experiment, is declared to be the only automatic device that will make change.

It can't be beat, but neither can it beat a customer. When the papers are all sold a sign drops down to so inform the customer. When the change in the box gives out a spur is automatically released which shoots into the slot so as to prevent the insertion of a nickel.

Enough space is left to allow pennies to be inserted, and the machine goes on distributing newspapers.

One machine for each of four newspapers in St. Louis will be placed in each car.—American Press Bulletin.

Staining Floors.

Before staining your floor be sure that it is clean. If there are any paint spots clean them off with caustic potash, and if there are any large cracks fill them with putty. There are various kinds of stain to be bought, but dilute it with turpentine if too thick. If the floor is to be all walnut in color, do the work with a soft brush or cloth. The next day it will be ready for waxing. To prepare this mix one gallon of turpenting with one pound of beeswax shaved thin. Soak the wax all night in the turpentine before using; then rub on with a woolen cloth. When the wood becomes well polished apply wax occasionally. A weighted brush is excellent to use on stained floors.

Howard Farmer Missing.

No little mystery surrounds the strange disappearance some months ago of Claire Schenck, a young farmer residing a short distance below Howard. Schenck lived with his mother on the farm along Hunter Run, at the foot of what is known as Schenck's hill, midway between Howard and Eagleville. Some time ago he purchased the interests of other heirs to the farm on which he resided, worth $5,000, and upward. In June, last, Schenck disappeared, without saying anything as to where he was going. Since that time nothing has been heard from him. Steps may be taken to have a trustee appointed to look after his interests until Schenck, who is about 22 years old, is heard from.

Typhoid at Woodland.

The increase in the number of typhoid fever patients at Woodland has greatly alarmed the people of that community, and by the aid of the state health authorities, three of whom visited the town yesterday, an earnest effort will be made to ferret out the cause, and as far as possible stay further ravages of the disease.

There is said to be thirty cases in the town at the present time, in addition to seven patients who were removed last week to the Clearfield hospital.—Philipsburg Journal.

To Make Stockings Last.

In order to make new stockings last beyond their time, one clever woman rubs paraffin on the heels and toes before putting the stockings on. They wear wonderfully under this treatment.

Another woman who considers this method uncomfortable (though, really it is not, so), runs a stocking darner into her new hosiery and darns it round and round at heel and toe with fine darning cotton. Done once, it never seems to be needed again, and the stockings last practically forever.

A Timely Hint.

If you are making or altering a skirt, remember the advice from Paris that the shackled skirt is going out. The new skirts are fuller than before and are free at the hem.

They have, besides, narrow flounces of wide lace, quilling, tucks, puffs and cordings.

CHAPTER XV.

THE KING.

THE vintner slowly lowered the pistol till it touched the table. Then he released it.

"That is better, your majesty."

"Why do you call me that?"

"Your face was familiar, but I failed at first to place it rightly. It was only after you had duped me into going after the veiled lady that I had any real suspicion. You are Frederick Leopold of Jugendheit."

"I shall not deny it further," proudly. "And take care how you speak to me, since I admit my identity."

"This is Ehrenstein. Here I shall talk to you as I please."

The king reddened, and his hand closed again over the pistol.

"I have saved your majesty twice from death. You force me to recall it to your mind."

The king had the grace to lower his eyes.

"The first time was at Bonn. Don't you recollect the day when an American took you out of the Rhine, an American who did not trouble himself to come around and ask for your thanks, who, in truth, did not learn till days after what an important person you were or were going to be?"

"For that moment, herr, I thank you."

"And for that in the garden below?"

"For that also. Now, why are you here?"

Carmichael went over to the table. He bent over it and with his face close to that of the king, "I demand to know what your intentions are toward that friendless goose girl."

"And what is that to you?" said the king angrily.

"It is this much: If you have acted toward her otherwise than honorably, well"—

"Go on. You interest me."

"Well, I promise to break every bone in your kingly body. In this room it is man to man. I recognize no king, only the physical being."

The king pushed aside the table, furious.

"You shall die for this insult!" said the king as quietly as his hard breathing would allow.

"I have heard that before. But how?" banteringly.

"I will waive my crown—man to man!"

"Sword sticks, sabers or hop poles? Come," savagely, "what do you mean by the goose girl?"

So intent on the struggle were they that neither heard the door open and close.

"Yes, my dear nephew, what do you mean by Gretchen?"

Carmichael released the king and with feline quickness stooped and secured the pistol which had fallen to the floor. Not sure of the new arrival's purpose, he backed to the wall. He knew the voice, and he recognized its owner.

"Put it in your pocket, Mr. Carmichael, and let us finish this discussion in English since there are many ears about the place."

"His royal highness?" murmured the king.

"Yes, sire! True to life!"

"A fine comedy," cried Herr Ludwig jovially, folding his arms over his deep chest, "a rollicking adventure! Well, nephew, you have not as yet answered either Mr. Carmichael's question or my own. What do you mean by Gretchen?"

"I love her," nobly. "And well for you, my uncle, that you come as you do. I would have married her. Wrong her? What was a crown to me, who till now have never worn one save in speech? You have been the king."

"Bodies must have heads; kingdoms must have kings. I have made an experiment, and this is the result. I wanted you to grow up unfettered by power; I wanted you to mingle with peoples, here and there, so when you became their head physician you could ably minister to their political diseases. And all this fine ambition tumbles down before the wooden shoes of a pretty goose girl."

"Now, Mr. Carmichael, what is your interest in Gretchen?" asked the king tartly.

Carmichael trembled with joy. Here was an opening for a double shot. "My interest in her is better than yours, for I have not asked her to become a king's mistress."

His royal highness bit his lip.

"Uncle!" cried the king, horrified at this revelation.

"Mr. Carmichael evidently has applied his ear to some keyhole," Herr Ludwig replied, recollecting well the day when he suggested to the beautiful young girl how easily and quickly she could secure the riches, the pretty things and the advantages she desired. It occurred in the tap room of the tavern the day he had the mysterious interview with the aged clockmaker. Yes, well did Herr Ludwig remember how he had told Gretchen that she could win the gowns, the carriages and the jewels her girl's heart craved solely through her beauty, "by the supreme right of her beauty alone."

"No, no, not through the keyhole!" retorted Carmichael. "The window was open. My clerk heard you plainly."

"Uncle, is this damnable thing true?"

"Yes. What would you? You were determined to make a fool of yourself. But rest easy. She is ignorant where this offer came from, and, moreover, she spurned it, as Mr. Carmichael's clerk will affirm. Oh, Gretchen is a fine little woman, and I would to God she was of your station!" And the mask fell from the regent's face, leaving it bitter and careworn. "Our presence is known in Dreiberg; it has been known for three days at least. And in coming up here I had another errand. Oh, I haven't forgotten it. In the street there are at least ten soldiers under the subchief of the police. Rather a curious conjunction."

The king turned white.

Carmichael ran to the rear window. He shrugged. "There's half a dozen in the garden too."

"Is there any way to the roofs?"

"None that would serve you."

"Mr. Carmichael," said the king, offering his hand, his handsome face kindly and without rancor, "I should be an ungrateful wretch if I did not ask your full pardon. I am indebted to you twice for my life, little as it amounts to. And in my kingdom you will always be welcome. Will you accept my hand as one man to another?"

"With happiness, your majesty. And I ask that you pardon my own hasty words."

"Thank you."

"He is only young," sighed Ludwig.

The king emptied the drawer, put the contents in his pack, tied the strings and put it under his arm.

"What are you going to do?" asked the uncle, vaguely perturbed.

"I am going down to the soldiers. I am no longer a vintner; I am a king!" And he said this in a manner truly royal.

"Gott!" burst from the prince regent. "This boy has marrow in his bones, after all. But the incarceration will not be long. There are 10,000 troops on the other side of the passes."

"Ten thousand? Well, they shall stay there," said the king determinedly. "I shall not begin my reign with war. I will tell the duke the truth. He will not dare go far."

"He will be a good politician, too," said Ludwig, with a smile of approval at Carmichael. "No, boy, there will be no war. And yet I was prepared for it, nor was I wrong in doing so. Already, but for Herbeck, there would be plenty of fighting in the passes. Ach! Could you but see the princess!"

"I have seen her," replied the king. "Heaven would have been kinder had I seen her months ago."

"Say to his serene highness, then, that you are willing to marry her."

"I'm afraid you do not understand, uncle," the king replied sadly. "I have the supreme happiness to love and to be loved. Of that nothing can rob me. And for some time to come, uncle mine, I shall treasure that happiness."

"And the little Gretchen?"

"Yes, yes! I have been a scoundrel." And the king's eyes grew moist. "You are happy, Mr. Carmichael. You have no crown to weigh against your love."

And from that moment Carmichael's heart warmed toward the young man, whose sorrow was greater than his own, for the king was giving up the woman who loved him, while Carmichael was only giving up the woman he loved, which is a distinction.

"Come, uncle," said the young king; "let us see what is going on downstairs."

Carmichael followed them down.

"There they are, men!" cried the subchief. "You are under arrest!"

"I am the king of Jugendheit," calmly announced Frederick Leopold. "Will you subject me to public arrest?"

"And I," said the uncle, "am Ludwig, prince regent."

The subchief laughed uproariously. The king of Jugendheit and the prince regent! This was a good joke indeed!

"Your majesty and your royal highness," said the subchief, his eyes twinkling, "will do me the honor of accompanying me to the Steinschloss. You are accused of being military spies from Jugendheit."

"May I retain this bundle?" inquired the king.

"Yes. I know what is in it. Forward, march!"

Carmichael made as though to protest, but Prince Ludwig signed for him to be silent.

An hour later Gretchen appeared before Frau Bauer. Gretchen had gone home immediately after the termination of the fight in the garden.

"He was not hurt, frau?" she asked timidly.

"Oh, no! The two of them gave themselves up readily. They are snug in the Steinschloss by this time."

"The Steinschloss!" Gretchen blanched. "Holy mother, what has happened?"

"Why, your vintner and Herr Ludwig were arrested an hour ago, accused of being spies from Jugendheit."

She groped blindly for the door.

"Where are you going, Gretchen?"

"To her highness! She will save him!"

Her highness was dreaming. She had fallen into this habit of late. A maid of honor announced that the young woman Gretchen sought her presence.

"Admit her. She will be a tonic," said Hildegarde.

Gretchen appeared, red eyed and dishevelled. Instantly she flung herself at the feet of the princess.

"Why, Gretchen!"

"They will not let me see him, highness!" Gretchen choked.

"What has happened, child?"

"They have arrested him as a spy from Jugendheit, and he is innocent. Save him, highness!"

"How can I save him?"

"He is not a spy."

"That must be proved, Gretchen. I cannot go to the Steinschloss and order them to liberate him." She lifted Gretchen to her feet.

"I have been there, and they will not let me see him. I love him so!"

"I can arrange that for you. I will go with you myself to the prison."

"Thanks, highness, thanks!" Gretchen was hysterical.

The king and his uncle had been given adjoining cells on the ground floor. The princess and her protegee were admitted without objection. The sergeant in charge of that floor even permitted them to go into the corridor unattended.

Voices.

"Hush!" whispered her highness, pressing Gretchen's arm.

"Ach! Wail, dear nephew; beat your hands upon the bars, curse, waste your breath on stone. Did I not warn you against this very thing when you proposed this mad junket? A fine scandal!"

"Woe to the duke for this affront!"

Gretchen started to speak, but the princess quickly put her hand over the goose girl's mouth.

"Uncle, I will have revenge for this!"

"Good! Bang—bang! Slash and cut! War is a great invention—on paper. Come, my boy; you were sensible enough when they brought us here. Control yourself. Be a king in all the word implies. For my part, I begin to see."

"And what do you see?"

"I see that the duke knows who we are, even if his police do not. He will keep us here a day or two and then magnanimously liberate us with profuse apologies. We shall be escorted to the frontier with honors. His highness loves a jest too well to let this chance escape. Besides, I see in the glass the fine Italian hand of Herbeck."

"Gretchen, Gretchen!" said the king.

Gretchen could stand it no longer. She wrenched herself free from the grasp of the princess, who, with pitying heart, understood all now. Poor, unhappy Gretchen!

"Here I am, Leopold," the goose girl cried, pressing her body against the bars and thrusting her hands through them.

"The devil!" murmured the man in the other cell.

"You here, Gretchen?" The king covered her hands with passionate kisses.

"Yes, yes! They have made a dreadful mistake. You are no spy from Jugendheit."

"No, Gretchen," said the voice from the next cell. "He is far worse than that. He is the king, Gretchen, the king."

"Uncle!" in anguish.

"Let us have it over with," replied Prince Ludwig sadly.

"The king!" Gretchen laughed shrilly. "What jest is this, Leopold?"

The king, still holding her hands, looked down.

"Leopold!" plaintively.

Still he did not speak, still he averted his head. But God knew that his heart was on the rack.

"Leo, look at me! You are laughing!" Gretchen cried. "Why, did we not work together in the vineyards, and did we not plan for the future? Ah, yes! You are a king only to me. I see. But it is a cruel jest, Leopold. Smile at me! Say something!"

"Gretchen, forgive me!" despairingly.

"He asks me to forgive him!" dully. "For what?"

"For being a villain! Yes," his voice keen with agony, "I am the king of Jugendheit. But am I less a man for that? Ah, God help me, I have a right to love like other men! Do not doubt me, Gretchen; do not think that I played with you. I love you better than my crown, better than my honor!"

CHAPTER XVI.

TWIN LOCKETS.

CARMICHAEL tramped about his room restless, uneasy, starting at sounds. He was waiting for Grumbach and his confreres. Anything but this suspense. A full day! And deeper, firmer, became his belief and conviction that Grumbach's affair vitally concerned her highness. He welcomed the knock on his door. Grumbach came in carrying under his arm a small bundle.

"Where are your companions?"

"They are waiting outside."

"The duke agrees," went on Carmichael. "He will give us an audience at 8:30."

"Did you mention my name?"

"No. I went roundabout. I also obtained his promise to say nothing to Herbeck till the interview was over."

Grumbach spread out on the bed the contents of the bundle.

"Look at these and tell me what you see, captain."

Carmichael inspected the little yellow shoes. He turned them over and over in his hand. He shook out the fold of the little cloak and the locket fell on the bed.

"When did you get this?" he cried excitedly. "It is her highness'!"

"So it is, captain, but I have carried it about me all these years."

"What?"

"Yes, captain. Count von Herbeck is a great statesman, but he made a terrible mistake this time. Listen. As sure as we are in this room together I believe that she whom we call the princess is not the daughter of the grand duke."

Carmichael sat down on the edge of the bed numb and without any clear idea where he was. Free! If she was not a princess she was free, free!

* * * * * * *

The duke allowed the quartet to remain standing for some time. He strode up and down before them, his eyes straining at the floor, his hands behind his back.

"I do not recognize any of these persons," he said to Carmichael.

Insects on Roots of Plants.

The Philadelphia manufacturer, having a suburban home, has had trouble with insects attacking the roots of celery, lima beans and other vegetables. His garden is situated near woods, and it was thought that this might be the cause of the preponderance of these insect pests. Specimens of the insects were sent to Prof. H. A. Surface, State Zoologist, Harrisburg, who after an examination of them, wrote:

"We duly received the lima beans which you sent to us, and find the insects on the roots to be aphids or plant lice. The best thing to do is to use tobacco dust abundantly in the soil close around the plants. Stir it in with a cultivator, or better, with a hoe. Any of your plants that are infested with aphids or root lice should be treated in this manner. The root louse is quite a pest and attacks many kinds of plants. Its presence is often indicated by the ants which you see going into the soil through holes in the surface of the ground beside the plant. There is a natural relationship between the ants and the lice. The former take care of the eggs of the latter, while the aphids furnish the sweet liquid, commonly called honey-dew, upon which the ants feed. The ants themselves do not injure the roots, but they take care of these pests, which are very injurious, as you have found.

"It is advisable to pull and burn all kinds of plants of which the roots are infested, doing this at the end of season, or as soon as it is found that there will be no further need of them for the production of this season's crop. Then cultivate the soil by frequent harrowing. If this be not done, it is especially important to rotate the crops, or change to crops that will not be infested by the pest. It is always advisable to destroy, as soon as possible, those parts of plants that are not further needed, and do this by throwing them on the compost heap, where they will soon decay and become fertilizer. The latter is a very economical and important method. If they be well rotted and kept wet during the winter, the insects in them will be killed. Where one has only a small area of land and cannot readily rotate crops, it is especially desirable for him to root out those that are diseased or infested, and cultivate the soil this fall. This will greatly lessen the need of rotation."

Green, the druggist has something interesting in his ad today.

William F. Shope is the new bookkeeper for R. B. Taylor, at the latter's coal office.

Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Schaeffer entertained Miss Bickford, of Lock Haven, at their home over Sunday.

It is with no little pleasure that we note the receipt of a check from Mrs. Rebecca F. Glossner, of Blanchard, and a kindly letter instructing us to send her "The Republican" for another year.

We are indebted to E. N. Irvin, of Boyer, West Virginia, who several days ago very thoughtfully sent us a nice money order which gives him "The Republican" every week for another year.

Next Sunday evening, at 7.30 o'clock, the Third Quarterly communion service will be observed in the United Evangelical church. Rev. W. C. Hoch, of Mifflinburg, will preach the Word and officiate. A cordial invitation to all is extended.

On Monday morning Rev. J. F. Hower, pastor of the United Evangelical church, departed for Canton, Ohio, to attend the general conference of his denomination. He will return home in time to conduct his regular services, on Sunday, next.

Harry Dickinson, who recently completed his apprenticeship as a jeweler, at F. P. Blair & Company's store, dedarted on Tuesday for Kane, where he will be employed in Copeland's jewelry store, Harry is a good man in his line and is on the high road to success.

Its a cold day when the venerable Charles Glenn doesn't get around. Monday morning was "some cold", but Mr. Glenn was around with that cheery smile of his and while in this neck o' woods dropped into "The Republican" office and advanced the date on his copy of the paper.

It is always a pleasure for us to greet the venerable John Klinger, who is a regular reader of "The Republican." Mr. Klinger has been suffering from a bad cold for several days, which accounts for the fact that he recently commissioned his daughter to call and advance his subscription another year.

B. W. Shipley, of Unionville, who is somewhere along about the eighties, but who could easily pass muster for sixty, was a Bellefonte visitor last week and while in town was a visitor to "The Republican" office. Possibly his being so well preserved at his ripe old ago is due to the fact that he has not used tobacco since he was a young man.

Frank Gehret, for years a resident of Bellefonte, was greeting friends in .town last week. Frank and his wife now spend their time between Atlantic City and Beaverdale, their son Will being located at the latter place, which is near Johnstown. Will is engaged in the drugstore business at Beaverdale and is making splendid progress in that hustling mining town.

Frank Naginey, Linn Harris, "Dutch" Otto, Harry Auman and anywhere from six to two dozen others are planning a trip to Philadelphia next week to see the world series games between the Athletics and Chicago, the pennant winners in the American and National baseball leagues. J. Mitchell Cunningham, the one man in town who deserves most of all to see the series, will be kept at home by business engagements.

Mr. and Mrs. Russel R. Blair this week moved from their Curtin Street home into the home of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Blair, in Spring Street, where they will reside this winter. Frank contemplates spending considerable time during the next six months operating his white clay bank, between Scotia and Stormstown, and Russel concluded that it would make things more satisfactory all around by moving into the parental home during that period.

When William McClellan awoke on Monday and realized that he was then crossing the sixtieth milestone in life's glad and sad pathway, he scratched his head and finally decided that the day was no different from any other. Along towards evening, however, he was conscious of the fact that the atmosphere was charged with more electricity than usual. Later in the evening he understood it all, for when he entered his home it was to be greeted by about forty neighbors and other friends, who were there to surprise him and who accomplished that to perfection.

Ollie Campbell, who will be remembered by a host of Bellefonte friends, was a visitor in town last week. Ollie is on the road for the Swank Hardware Company, of Johnstown, and in addition conducts an electrical supply store at Barnesboro. It is just possible that he may conclude to sell his store, in which event he will return to Bellefonte and again make this place his home. It will be recalled that about one year ago he was terribly burued in a gasoline explosion, at Barnesboro. For something like nineteen days life was in danger, but being endowed with an exceptionally strong constitution and a large reserve fund of will power, he pulled through and today is apparently as well as ever, although carrying with him some scars as a relic of his painful experience. Ollie is a regular reader of "The Republican" and while here advanced his subscription another year.

See Montgomery & Co's. new ad.

Miss Anna Hoffer, who was a pleasant visitor at the C. T. Gerberich home last week, returned to Philipsburg on Saturday.

S. D. Ray is so busy these days at his shirt factory that he is in need of several more girls. See his advertisement in our want ad column.

George R. Mock, of Philipsburg, last week disposed of his interest in a Clearfield meat market, possession of which he secured through the misfortune of a former owner.

Mr. and Mrs. Abram Goss, of Philipsburg, who visited here for a week with their son, Harry, have gone to Lewistown, where they are visiting their daughter, Mrs. James McCartney, for several days.

Misses Mary Evans, Roberta Bell, Edith Baldrige, Claribel Dean and Marian D. Patterson, all of Hollidaysburg, made up an automobile party that visited Bellefonte on Monday and had dinner at the Bush House before returning home.

The editor of "The Republican" wishes to extend his thanks to Mrs. Maria Reeser, of State College, who is one of our valued subscribers at that place, for her very kindly letter of a day or two ago, enclosing a neat one dollar bill, thus advancing the date on her copy of the paper.

Professor J. C. Weirick, of Howard, has assumed charge of his duties with the Lock Haven High School, for which position he is so well qualified. That he will meet with success there is the confident prediction of those who know him and of his work in the past. Professor Weirick is a regular reader of "The Republican" and his removal to Lock Haven necessitates, of course, a change in his postoffice address.

On Thursday afternoon, last, we were mourning our fate in not being able to get down to the fair when Harry M. Stere, of Unionville, dropped in for a little social chat. With Mrs. Stere and their child, Mr. Stere had been attending the fair and was at that time waiting for the afternoon train home. Mr. Stere is not only a successful and progessive merchant at Unionville but he is a splendid fellow to meet.

Lawyer James C. Furst and Wallace Gephart departed on Tuesday for a two-weeks' hunting and fishing trip to the Maine woods. Last year they enjoyed an outing along the best fishing streams in Maine and this year they are looking forward to a pleasant trip with rod and gun, aided by guides who will be secured when they arrive in Maine. They are endeavoring to secure the same guides they had last year.

Joseph Alexander, Republican nominee for State Senator, came over from Clearfield County last week to greet his numerous friends in this end of the Thirty-fourth senatorial district. Joe has the happy faculty of making friends wherever he goes and each visit he makes to Centre County adds to his popularity here. All indications are that when the votes are counted in November it will be found that Centre County has stood loyally by the gallant old soldier and member of the famous Bucktails.

Dr. John Keichline was a Bellefonte arrival last week, coming over from Petersburg to attend the fair and also to see his wife and baby and also his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Keichline. Dr. Keichline had planned coming with his wife and baby, who preceded him by several days, but some patients at Petersburg required his presence there and he consequently had to defer his trip. As it was, he was able to remain here but a few days owing to the demands of his rapidly growing practice.

Mrs. George E. Etter, of Philadelphia, who was formerly Mrs. Barry, of Bellefonte, who has been very ill in the Germantown hospital, with typhoid fever, is slightly improved but not yet out of danger. It is good news to her old-time friends here to learn that she is somewhat better and their earnest hope is that she will soon be restored to health. "The Republican" is a weekly visitor at the Etter home and ere this copy is received there we trust that Mrs. Etter will be much better than was the case several days ago, when a letter from her daughter, Mrs. Elmer H. Nace, very thoughtfully gave us the news of the slight improvement in her condition.

M. C. Gephart, our home dealer, rendered his usual exhibit of fine pianos and player-pianos at the Centre County fair last week. His display and demonstrations were an unusual success, through the assistance of Mr. Denning, his representative from Philipsburg, as well as his pianist, Dean Goodman, of Blanchard, who proved himself a rising star in his profession. Mr. Gephart has sold many hundreds of fine pianos in Bellefonte, and throughout Centre County. As the result of his consistent efforts he has won as many satisfied customers who attest to his reliability and integrity and deserving of patronage in his line of any and all who may contemplate buying a good, reliable piano. Patronize your home dealer, where you can get AS MUCH, if not more, for your money than elsewhere. See his new line of new scale and latest, up-to-date design and sweet, pure-tone pianos. Nothing better. Store, No. 19 North Allegheny Street, Bellefonte, Pa.

On Friday, last, an automobilist from DuBois, and a newspaper man, we are ashamed to say, was intoxicated and lost control of his machine while going down Spring Street, between Howard and Lamb Streets. His car dashed into a telephone pole and unfortunately damaged the automobile more than the owner.

Mrs. D. H. Hastings on Monday night, last, entertained the Bellefonte chapter Daughters of the American Revolution. Mrs. Alexander E. Patton, of Curwensville, a Vice President General of the National D. A. R., and Mrs. Allen P. Perley, of Williamsport, State Regent, were guests of honor and delivered brief addresses. The Hastings home was gaily decorated with flags for the occasion. About forty persons were present.

The Maher Stock Company played to a big audience at Garman's Opera House on Monday night, and has been billed for the entire week, with the exception of last night, when Gorton's minstrels played to an appreciative audience. The minstrel street parade, at noon yesterday, was the first of the kind this season. The Maher Stock Company is much better than the average and will present a change in bill every night during the remainder of the week.

A Commendable Act.

Charley Rowland, of Philipsburg, is one of those citizens who keep doing things for their home community that they mean more to the public than the others who do nothing. Every now and then Mr. Rowland does something for Philipsburg. Last week he volunteered to the Philipsburg band the free use of one of his buildings for practice purposes. Furthermore, the building is to be lighted and heated free for the bandmen. Bellefonte has a new band, now struggling to buy new uniforms. Thus far we have not heard of anybody stepping to the front with an offer to give the use of a band hall, lighted and heated, free.

Miss Ebert Married

In the presence of a few invited guests, at the residence of Augustus Emel, on East Beaver Street, on Monday evening, Miss Bertha I. Ebert, of Spring Mills, and J. Grover Cleveland Solt, of Bellefonte, were married by Rev. J. F. Hower. After the ceremony refreshments were served, to which the guests did ample justice. Both of the young people are well known in Bellefonte and a large of friends extend congratulations and best wishes.

QUALITY vs. QUANTITY

The Royal Union is a small Company. It has never wanted to be the biggest, but has always earnestly striven to be the best. Holders of matured policies say that we have accomplished our desire. Mere size counts for nothing. There is a big difference between the size of a pumpkin and of a four carat diamond. There is also a big difference in the value and quality of the article. There is quality about the Royal Union. Any Insurance Commissioner will tell you this.
